Mansion is sold

By GARY SCHNEIDER
Press-Record Editor

The mansion of Thomas Brimberry is sold. Not to Cardinal Catcher Darrell Porter, but to Leon Streif, owner of Vandalia Bus Lines.

Streif told the Press-Record Friday afternoon that he purchased the large home on Parkway Drive as an investment. "I got into it because I like deals. I speculate, but my wife likes it and we are going to move into it—for the time being, at least," Streif said.

"I felt it was a very good bargain, if not a steal. You couldn't build a big house for what we paid for it," he added.

He stressed that he is not affiliated in any way with Brimberry, who is accused of having been the mastermind in the bilking of the now-defunct Stix & Co. stock brokerage in St. Louis. "My only fear is that people will associate me with Brimberry. I'm not a Brimberry. I'm a businessman here in Caseyville," Streif stated.

What about the Porter rumors which persisted for so long? "I heard Darrell Porter was interested in leasing it, so I wrote Porter a note that I own the house and would entertain leasing it to him," Streif said. He received no reply.

Indeed, the Cardinals did have an influence on his buying the house. Bo Beuckman of Collinsville is a close friend of Streif's and is close to many in the baseball organization. Beuckman told Streif of the house and Streif thought some Cardinal, possibly Porter, would be interested in leasing it.

The Streifs have 10 children, but only one still at home, a girl. "I think she will like the house. It has a pool," Streif added.

Streif is sole owner of Vandalia Bus Lines, which has more than 200 buses and 130 employees. "We work for what we get and we have been successful enough to have the bank accept our offer to buy the house," he said.

In fact, the mansion sale came at a bad time for Streif. He says he had bid on it and was looking at some property at Lake of the Ozarks. When he heard a KMOX radio report that Porter had purchased the mansion, he closed the deal on the Ozark property.

Later, the Bank of Edwardsville, holder of the title on the Brimberry

She described the occasion as "the beginning of an exciting future." (Press-Record Photo by Patrick Foley)

Teamwork to create GC college is cited

"This will be a valuable source of information and education for the future. Thank you for making Granite City Center a dream come true," Patricia W. Bartsokas, chairman of the Belleville Area College Board of Trustees, told an audience of about 200 persons at the dedication of the new college center Thursday afternoon.

"I would like to honor Avery Schermer (a member of the board of trustees from Granite City) and I am sorry he couldn't be here today." The center in Granite City was his dream and nobody worked harder for it, she contended.

"This is the first day of an exciting future for the Granite City Center, providing quality education at a reasonable cost to you, the student, and to you, the taxpayer," Mrs. Bartsokas said.

She noted that active public support made the center possible. "Our success is your success. Granite City Center will strive to provide you, your children and your grandchildren with a bright future," she said.

Dr. Bruce R. Wissore, president of Belleville Area College, of which GCC is an arm, noted, "Granite City is a great place. Every time I come in this building and see these people, I feel an enthusiasm I don't feel elsewhere. Everyone should glory."

"History tends to repeat itself. In 1946, the Belleville School Board decided to start a junior college. Some 37 years later, it has an enrollment of over 13,000 students. In 1983, another school board has done the same—made a commitment."

Dr. Wissore noted that in 1946, BAC started with 46 students. He said Granite City Center is starting with more than 2,000 students and jokingly charged Dr. Frank Gornick, provost of GCC, to increase its enrollment by the same percentage. "Your goal for the year 2020 is 565,217 students," he jested.

"What is going to happen here is very good," he commented and commended the BAC Board, the GCC citizens' advisory committee, the Granite City School Board and the citizens and organizations which pushed for the local college.

Dr. Wissore also praised the role of Truck route laws not enforced

Truck routes laws in Granite City are not being enforced, according to a study prepared for the city by the Southwestern Illinois Metropolitan and Regional Planning Commission.

Simple observation of downtown truck traffic patterns on Niedringhaus Avenue seems to bear out those past findings, residents say.

The routing study presented to the council emphasizes the problem currently facing aldermen as they prepare to vote Tuesday on an updated truck route ordinance.

The new law would allow through truck traffic to travel on Rock Road and the 19th Street Overpass. The route is not recognized by the city's existing truck route ordinances, but still carries considerable truck traffic, according to the study.

Truck route laws currently on the city books:

— Allow truck traffic to flow from one end of Nameoki Road to the other.

— Permit trucks to move along Madison Avenue only from the Madison city limits for the six-block trip to 20th Street.

— Let trucks travel a cross-town truck path from Edwardsville Road to Route 3 via 20th Street and Missouri Avenue.

— Route trucks along Edwardsville Road for the entire length of the city.

— Give trucks on Madison Avenue an alternate route to Route 3 by way of 18th Street and Benton Street, where trucks must make a sharp turn onto Niedringhaus Avenue.

— Permit a short truck lane that wraps around the outskirts of Granite City Steel property from 20th Street to Lee Avenue, where it bends to 21st Street and empties into Edwardsville Road.

The route restrictions apply to any truck driving through the city to a point outside the city or to any truck picking up its load in the city for delivery outside the city. They do not prevent trucks from making deliveries outside the recognized routes.

According to city laws, trucks are not permitted to travel on Niedringhaus Avenue through the downtown's central business district. The updated truck route law also would prohibit trucks

Hearing on lead in air

Granite City again has topped the state in particulate and lead pollution, but both were found in lower amounts than last year, according to the state's annual air quality report.

Last September, the state launched a lead investigation here following findings in the annual report. This year, the state will conduct a Sept. 15 public hearing on its proposed plan to enforce a local lead control program.

The proposed new law being sponsored by Fifth Ward Alderman Jake Varadian would direct trucks from Rock Road to the overpass and down 19th Street to the 1800 block of Cleveland Boulevard, and then over to Besides lead and particulate pollution, the city also ranked highest among eight sample testing sites for tiny air particles. The smaller the size of particulate matter, the greater chance for it to become lodged in the lungs or absorbed into the bloodstream, authorities say.

They add that particulate pollution has been associated with increased respiratory diseases, heart attacks and cancer. Lead intake in humans has

Rebirth for Pontoon Beach shopping area

A major redevelopment of the Gaslight Plaza Shopping Center in Pontoon Beach is being undertaken by developer Jim Green.

Oakmont Center is the name of the new development, which is to be expanded to include a cinema and restaurant. Plans also provide space for a bank facility which could be added in the future.

Carpenters for J. D. Builders, owned by Green, are doing extensive remodeling work to the existing shopping center building which has housed Viviano's and Schermer Brothers grocery stores in the past and the P. N. Hirsch Co. department store which closed in April of this year. The Pizza Pit restaurant, operated by Nameoki Township Supervisor Harry Briggs and his family, is the only business presently open in the shopping center.

Construction is underway and a new exterior front is being constructed on the building. A permit for the construction was issued to Green by the Pontoon Beach Village Board.

OAKMONT CENTER, formerly Gaslight Walk Shopping Center in Pontoon Beach, is undergoing a facelift and expansion, as well as a name change. Area builder Jim Green is developer of the project.

JOHN BELLCOFF

Bellcoff a candidate

"I will run for mayor (of Madison) and I will be making an official announcement at some date in the future," John Bellcoff, Madison City clerk, told the Press-Record during a barge trip on the Mississippi River Thursday evening.

Bellcoff was surrounded by several Madison persons, including Madison Chief of Police Donald Bridick, when he was asked about rumors he plans to seek the mayor's post.

He told the Press-Record exclusively that the rumors are true and he has no plans to withdraw from the 1985 race as he did in the last mayor campaign in 1981.

He declined to discuss his candidacy further, saying only that he will have more information after he makes his formal announcement.

Although there were numerous politicians on the boat trip (see related story), Madison Mayor Mike Sasyk was not among them.

Bellcoff has been city clerk of Madison since 1967 and formerly served on the Madison Board of Education for 19 years.

Governor weighs public financing

By Al Manning
SPRINGFIELD — The next gubernatorial campaign in Illinois may be financed with taxpayers' money.

The Illinois General Assembly — after 10 years of consideration — approved legislation which authorizes public financing for gubernatorial candidates.

Gov. James Thompson pledged to study the issue carefully, but he has not indicated whether he will sign the bill into law.

The timing may prove to be correct for a variety of political reasons.

The idea of financing gubernatorial campaigns was first brought in Illinois in 1972 by Paul Simon, soon after he lost his bid for governor. Had he been elected chief executive, he said he would have pushed for such a bill.

Ethics in government was a popular subject back then — $800,000 in cash was found in a shoe box belonging to the late Secretary of State Paul Powell, and stories of laundered money in Watergate were beginning to surface.

In response to public pressure, a new law was enacted making state and local politicians accountable for their political money. For the first time, politicians would be required to disclose how much money they contributed to their campaign, and they had to detail publicly how the money was spent.

State Sen. Phil Rock of Oak Park, then a new member, introduced a bill on public financing of campaigns, but it did not receive serious consideration.

Several attempts to pass the bill were made in subsequent years, but not until this session — with Rock as president of the Senate and both chambers controlled by Democrats — did the measure pass.

Now Thompson must decide whether to sign the bill, and he has the luxury of not being overwhelmed by immediate political considerations.

The next election is not until 1986, so the jockeying for governor is not intense. Thompson is not expected to seek re-election, even though he talks at times about campaigning for a fourth term.

Thompson spent $4 million on his campaign, and promptly ran up a $400,000 debt when the outcome was challenged by Democrat Adlai Stevenson.

A key provision in the legislation would prohibit candidates from spending that much money.

"The amounts of money spent in campaigns for this state's highest office has become almost obscene," says the bill's chief sponsor, Sen. Dawn Clark Natchez of Chicago.

"Persons of modest means have been shut out of the political process because they do not have the wherewithal to raise the money necessary to run for governor. Those who are able to run must depend on special interest money to make their campaign feasible. The situation is in direct conflict with the principles of good government."

The bill is patterned after the national law providing for the public financing of presidential elections.

Federal taxpayers may, if they so choose, designate $1 of their tax dollars ($2 on a joint return) for the presidential campaign fund. Candidates participate voluntarily. Although they are not required to accept the public money, all of the major candidates have done so.

Illinois taxpayers similarly would be able to designate $1 of their tax dollars for a gubernatorial fund, and candidate participation would not be mandatory.

The law would work like this: Candidates would have to raise $100,000 in increments of $500 or less in order to qualify for the public money. Once the threshold is reached, the government would match $1 for $1 of contributions up to $150.

Individuals would be limited to contributions of $1,000 in the primary and another $1,000 in the general election. Corporations, labor unions, associations and political action committees too would be limited to $5,000 contributions. Political parties also would face certain restrictions.

Candidates would be able to spend up to $35,000 of personal family funds.

Candidates would be limited to $15 million in expenses for a primary, and $2 million for a general election. Government could match up to one-half of that amount.

Seventeen states have enacted such a law since Illinois first began debating the legislation a decade ago.

Common Cause, a self-styled citizens' lobby, says the law is working in other states, and it has discouraged special interest contributions.

"We are not saying that anyone accepted a contribution in exchange for a promise of a contract, a favorable ruling or even a job in return for that contribution," said Harriet McCullough, executive director of Common Cause, Illinois.

"But the current process of financing of political campaigns allows the voter to suspect that the government is being bought and sold."

In that state, according to the testimony, contributions of $10,000 and $20,000 were common. Less than 100 contributors donated half the money.

Illinois legislators adopted most of the provisions of the New Jersey law and, they think, improved upon it by establishing a $100,000 threshold to discourage less-than-serious candidates whose major goal would be to obtain the money.

Although party affiliation is not of overwhelming importance in this issue, the political reality is that Democrats react much more favorably to the idea than do Republicans.

The Republican chief executive may be receiving some heavy opposition from members of his own party.

Many opponents violently object to the idea because they do not think taxpayers' money should be used for such a purpose. They think government money should be directed to providing necessary services, and should not be used by politicians to further their own careers.

Although the bill did not receive a lot of attention during the spring session of the legislature, without question gubernatorial campaigns would be drastically changed if Thompson signs the measure into law.

SALE OF SECURITIES State eases its control

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. James Thompson signed legislation easing state controls over the sale of securities.

Thompson and Secretary of State Jim Edgar, who named the advisory committee which drafted the legislation, both praised the bill as a step forward in promoting business in the state.

"Illinois law on securities regulation needed to be brought up to date with the changes that have been made at the federal level," Thompson said. "This bill will allow businesses across the country to tap investment capital in Illinois that they have previously been unable to use."

The bill (HB 663) amends the state's 30-year-old securities act to make state law conform to the federal regulatory approach of full disclosure of securities transactions, while removing "merit" regulation of securities sales by the state securities commissioner.

The section of the bill removing merit regulation became effective July 1, 1984, while all other provisions of the bill will be effective Jan. 1.

The legislation, Thompson said, will give Illinois investors immediate access to new securities issues registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, make it easier for small businesses to raise capital through essentially private securities offerings, and the state's "discrimination against quality over-the-counter issues" by adding a blue-chip exemption, allow investment bankers more ease in underwriting and selling securities to Illinois clients, and increase securities registration fees to generate additional revenue.

Edgar said the bill would reduce red tape and regulations while encouraging capital formation and providing new investment opportunities.

"After having one of the most restrictive securities laws in the nation," Edgar said, "it's time state government let Illinois investors make their own investment decisions."

The bill was sponsored in the Senate by Sen. David Barkhausen, R-Waukegan, and in the House by Rep. Jim Reilly, R-Jacksonville.

Not likely to impact Illinois

SPRINGFIELD — Last year, just before the bill hiking the federal gas tax was passed, a brief amendment was tacked on which banned federal payments for highway signs produced "by convict labor."

The prohibition was the brainchild of the powerful American Road and Transportation Builders Association.

Now, a year later, a number of states are agitating for removal of the ban, and two bills have been introduced in Congress which would remove the restriction.

However, Illinois apparently will be taking no part in the lobbying against the restriction, since spokesmen for both the Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) and the state Department of Corrections say its impact on IDOT is, at most, minimal.

The difference is Illinois' procedures and those of all or most of the other 36 states, which use prison-made highway signs. In Illinois, signs to be installed in construction of new federally funded highways or rehabilitation of such routes are routinely acquired by the contractor, who obtains them on his own from private suppliers as part of the contract, according to Bob Craven, engineer of traffic operations for IDOT.

While the state does obtain and use a large number of signs manufactured in the metal shop at the Pontiac prison, they are used for "maintenance," Craven said. (Replacement of signs which are destroyed by accident or vandals, or which merely wear out.)

Howard Skolnik, who heads the corrections industries program of which the sign-making operation is a part, said last year the Pontiac metal shop did about $1 million in business. Of that, he said, about $850,000 was for signs and related production for IDOT. The remainder was chiefly bunks and metal furniture for prison cells.

Craven said the department has about 400,000 signs on the 17,000 miles of highway maintained by IDOT in Illinois. While the average replacement is on a seven-year cycle, he said some high risk signs must be replaced twice a year, and others may stand for 10 years before their replacement.

Overall, Craven said, about 40,000 replacement signs a year are installed — using signs from the prison shop and signs produced by IDOT in its own facilities.

Truck route

18th Street. The ordinance also would accept truck traffic on 16th Street.

A biller opponent of the proposal is Varadian's fellow Fifth Ward alderman, Lloyd Bailey, who has gathered 277 signatures from ward residents objecting to Rock Road being designated a truck route.

Bailey attempted to block Varadian's ordinance when it was brought up for a final vote Aug. 9, but he introduced a motion to delete the Rock Road overpass-19th Street section.

After voting was in progress on the Bailey motion, Mayor Paul Schuler asked that the matter be referred back to Bailey and Varadian, aldermen of the ward. Varadian then made a motion based on the mayor's suggestion and it was referred to them.

Varadian has since decided to withhold comment on the deadlock until talking with Bailey, but Bailey said he and Varadian have nothing to discuss. Bailey plans to reintroduce his motion Tuesday and doubts the validity of the procedure that allowed voting to be halted on his motion after four votes had already been cast. Of those votes, Aldermen Sam Whitmer, Morten and Fred "Pat" Schuman had voted for the motion blocking the overpass to trucks. Alderman Paul Bowler cast the only negative vote. Bowler, president of the Tri-County Transport Co., said the city might not have the legal right to enforce an ordinance restricting trucks from certain city routes, citing the 19th Street Overpass as an example.

"The overpass was meant to do certain things," Bowler said. "It's next to the port district." Bailey, however, said most towns have restrictive truck route ordinances and that those paths generally direct traffic away from populated areas.

Two parks and a fire station are located along Rock Road. Bailey said about 200 to 275 children will soon be traveling across Rock Road to Prather School.

Alderman Sharon Perjak, however, opposes the closing of the overpass to trucks, because she feels the move would increase truck traffic in her ward along Missouri Avenue. Residents there have complained about damage caused by vibrations from heavy trucks.

Varadian decided to update the truck route ordinance when he noted that unregulated truck traffic was damaging pavements and littering streets in the city.

The truck route study advises that any truck routing plan be accompanied by activities designed to make motorists and truck drivers more aware of truck route locations. Few truck route signs are currently posted in the city.

Besides the route additions suggested by Varadian, the study recommends: — On-street parking be prohibited on both sides of Benton between 19th Street and Niedringhaus Avenue, to allow room for trucks to maneuver.

— Parking be eliminated on 20th Street between Edison Avenue and State Street.

— Areas restricted from through trucks should be clearly marked, specifically the segment of Niedringhaus Avenue between 19th and 20th streets.

— The city should work with the police department to ensure that truck regulations are enforced.

Additional on-street loading facilities in the downtown area be coordinated with the city's downtown redevelopment plans.

— An engineering study be conducted to determine the feasibility of expanding the intersection of Niedringhaus Avenue and Cleveland Boulevard to provide room for semi-trailers turning at that location.

Citizens Forum attended by 50

The first meeting of the Granite City Citizens Forum, intended to spark interest in government activities, attracted about 50 residents last week.

Those attending represented all seven of the city's wards and 22 of its 37 precincts, according to Donald Conley, group organizer.

Conley stated that his objective was for the public to become more aware of government issues affecting their community. He hopes the group will be able to analyze information themselves and give their input to government officials before they make their decisions.

"The Forum will be non-partisan... will function as a group towards the goal of achieving and maintaining fair, efficient, responsible and representative government processes," Conley stated.

He said the forum will attempt to work closely with the Granite City Township Board and Council, Granite City Community Unit District 9 and the Granite City Park District.

The group elected as temporary officers: Conley, president; Alex Toth, vice president; Sue Dickey, secretary; and Peter Ferro, treasurer.

Members on the Constitutional Committee will be Harlan Dickey, Gerry Conley, Paul Meyer, Sandi Dakins and Mark Malone.

Three standing committees were established to be responsible for attending public meetings. They are: Granite City Township and Council, Russell Weil and Conley; Granite City school district, Mike Lombardi, Joe Barbieri and Nick Lucido; and park district, Harlan Dickey, Alex Toth and Carl Paschoff.

Conley and Sandi Dakins will be responsible for the Organizational Membership Committee. A discussion on home rule was postponed and will be brought up again as soon as new officers have obtained information on the issue.

Conley emphasized the importance of voting and encouraged residents to register to vote. Special voter registration dates and locations are:

Illinois anglers increase fishing habits

Illinois anglers are making substantially more fishing trips than ever before, according to recently analyzed results of a massive statewide sport fishing survey conducted in 1980.

Dick Bauer, Fisheries Resource Analyst with the Department of Conservation, explained that the results of 8,300 angler questionnaires were studied and compared with the previous survey conducted in 1977.

"One of the most significant facts revealed by the survey was that the total number of fishing trips in Illinois increased from 37 million in 1977 to more than 42 million in 1980," Bauer said.

"By comparing the two surveys, we learned that the number of trips to rivers and streams increased by more than 30 percent, trips to Lake Michigan increased by 20 percent, and trips to lakes and ponds increased by about 10 percent. The only decrease was for the three major reservoirs, where trips declined by nearly 13 percent."

Bauer said the surveys were conducted because information about Illinois anglers. "Our Department has conducted creel surveys on many lakes and streams throughout the state in the past," Bauer said. "However, we need information about the general character of the Illinois anglers — such as type of water they fish, what fish he seeks and harvests, and other basic information."

The information from the 1980 survey is being used to compile and update the statewide comprehensive fisheries plan, Bauer said.

"The survey reveals the needs and desires of the anglers in Illinois," he added. "With the renovation of the Little Grassy Fish Hatchery and the completion of the Sand Ridge Fish Hatchery, the DOC will be able to better meet these needs."

To document these needs, information was gathered using fishing questionnaires. A summary of the 8,300 anglers polled indicated the following:

— Only 55.9 percent of the anglers fishing in Illinois are licensed, the rest are exempt due to age disabilities.

— Nearly 1.5 million anglers sport fished in Illinois during the year, with only 4.5 percent being out-of-state anglers.

— The greatest number of fishing trips were spent seeking black bass (24.3 percent), followed by catfish (21.2 percent), crappie (12.7 percent), and sunfish (10.4 percent).

— Sunfish represented the most frequently caught fish (28 percent), followed by crappie (23.3 percent), smelt (11.3 percent), catfish (8.8 percent), and black bass (7.4 percent).

— Anglers indicated they most prefer to fish for catfish and black bass, followed by crappie, walleye, northern pike or muskie, and sunfish.

— Anglers averaged 28.5 fishing trips in Illinois during the year.

— About 42.4 million fishing trips were made in Illinois waters during the year.

— The greatest number of fishing trips were made to lakes and ponds (53.9 percent), followed by streams (30.2 percent), Lake Michigan (9 percent) and the three major reservoirs, Lakes Carlyle, Shelbyville, and Rend (6.9 percent).

— When the waters of Illinois were divided into 14 different categories, the most fished water-type was privately-owned lakes and ponds (16 percent of total trips) followed by public lakes (15 percent), and state conservation lakes (13 percent).

— Anglers fished from the bank on 55.8 percent of their trips, while they fished from the boat on 44.2 percent of their trips.

— About three percent of all fishing trips were for ice fishing.

Bauer said the survey revealed that 82 percent of the trips occurred between April 1 and September 30. Anglers were asked the question: "Why do you go fishing? The most common answer was: "For the enjoyment of the outdoors"; followed by: "For the thrill of catching fish."

The survey — partially funded by Dingell-Johnson monies — is being repeated this year. "We plan on repeating the survey every three years," Bauer said. "This on-going effort will provide us with a better idea of what the Illinois angler wants, and help us better manage the fisheries resource."

DOC says Illinoisans not utilizing rent-a-camps

SPRINGFIELD — A lot of Illinoisans are missing out on a good deal, and the main reason may be that they are unaware of it.

Ray Norbut, chief of the Conservation Department's Division of Public Lands, said DOC's "Rent-A-Camp" program "was a huge success in 1982" when offered at only four state parks, but it has begun to falter this year after being expanded to 18 Department-owned sites.

"The somewhat unseasonably wet and cool weather throughout most of the spring and early summer may have had something to do with the low utilization of our Rent-A-Camp sites, but I believe the main factor is the lack of publicity about the program," Norbut stated. "People won't take advantage of these facilities if they don't know they are available," he said.

"Rent-A-Camp" is a tailor-made camping plan offering ready-made, fully-equipped camping sites for a nominal rental fee in addition to the regular camping fee. The program is intended as a low-cost introduction to camping for those who have not yet tried the activity, and as a service to experienced campers who do not own camping gear or cannot easily transport it, Norbut explained.

At each Rent-A-Camp site, users will find a tent, cot, charcoal grill, battery-powered camp light, fire extinguisher, broom and trash pan, fire ring, picnic table and trash barrel.

All the camper need bring is food, cooking and eating utensils, charcoal and lighter fluid, sleeping bag (or blankets and pillows), folding chairs, and clothing, including rainwear.

Most of the canvas tents are four-cot units, nine feet by 11 feet. But 14 by 14-foot, eight-cot tents are available at some sites for large families. All of the tents have canvas floors and are placed on wooden platforms for weather protection and to increase air circulation.

Rental fees are $9 for small-tent sites and $16 for large-family units, plus camping charges of $3 in Class C camping areas (those offering vehicular access only), $5 for Class B campgrounds (having vehicular access and electricity or showers), and $6 for Class A areas (vehicular access, electricity and showers). Reservations are not required, but are recommended.

"Last year, the Rent-A-Camp sites were in use most of the time, so we expanded the program," Norbut said. "Because of our experience in '82, we know there is a demand and a need for the program, but apparently we haven't got the message out to enough people that it exists," he added.

Although some Rent-A-Camp sites are occupied on weekends, usage is nowhere near capacity. Most sites are unoccupied through the week, Norbut reported.

Parks having Rent-A-Camp sites, and the number of such sites:

Pere Marquette, near

Allon, two; Eldon Hazlet, on Lake Carlyle, two; Giant City, 12 miles south of Car-bond, one; Perna Clyffe, at Goreville, two, including a large-family tent; Wayne

Fitzgerald, on Rend Lake, two.

Last year, Rent-A-Camp was conducted only at Apple River Canyon, Pere Marquette, Kickapoo and Eagle Creek State Parks.

Reservation forms or further information on the program can be obtained at the parks or by contacting the Conservation Department's Springfield office, in care of Rent-A-Camp Program, 524 South Second St., Springfield, IL 62762. The phone is (217) 782-6752.

In search of a uniform spelling

In journalism school, they teach one thing above all others: accuracy. Names, places, dates are all paramount.

My pet peeve as far as accuracy goes in names: "If you don't get something as simple as the name right, I remember a silver-haired professor telling me, 'you can't expect the public to believe the rest of it.'"

How true!

Perhaps that's why Colonel Muammar Khadafi, Libya's president bothers me so much. Have you noticed all the ways the media spells his name? We certainly have.

The editorial cartoon service with which we subscribe spells his name as Khadafi.

Time Magazine in an article in its current issue which features a story on Chad and the destabilization of northern and central Africa refer to the Libyan president as Gaddafi.

Another fine magazine, LIFE spells the controversial leader's name Khadafi, similar to our cartoon service, but still with variations.

Peter Jennings, ABC News's anchor, recently interviewed the Libyan leader and low and behold the name under the president's picture was spelled Qaddafi.

To many people, the uncertainty of how to spell the president of Libya's name may not mean to much, but to a news person, who is taught to always get complete accurate spellings, it's nagging.

One suggestion was that one spelling is the Moslem spelling and the other is the English equivalent. That's fine for two of the spellings, but how do you explain the rest of them.

We may not like Khadafi, or Gaddafi, or Qaddafi, oh well, but we should probably learn to spell his name.

Landfill pressure will be eased

Just as the Madison-St. Clair counties area was a frequent dumping ground for "roaring '20s" Prohibition gang war casualties, it too often in the 1970s and 1980s has been a dumping area where Missouri municipalities and companies "stash their trash."

Thanks to a new project by the Missouri-Illinois Bi-State Development Agency, the pressure on this region's landfills and disposal sites will begin to ease. The agency has announced plans for spring 1984 construction of a recycling plant that will convert rubbish into marketable elements—including steam to heat downtown St. Louis area buildings.

The $70 million trash-to-energy facility at Cass Avenue and O'Fallon, First and Second streets will be capable of consuming almost all garbage produced by St. Louisans; it will take over the steam service now provided by Union Electric Co. A fifth of the cost will be paid by private vendors and the rest will be financed from revenue bonds.

Planning was coordinated by John D. Booth, Bi-State general manager of development. The agency will own the plant, which was designed by the CH2M Hill engineers and will be operated by Thermal Resources of St. Louis.

The plant will burn up to 900 tons of unprocessed waste daily, seven days a week. All refuse collected by the City of St. Louis, including what is burned in two city incinerators, will be taken to the new plant; use of the incinerators will end.

The project will meet pollution standards, qualifying for the "lowest achievable emission rate." The plant will not accept hazardous wastes, biological wastes, household appliances, vehicles, liquid wastes or furniture. Wooden waste must not exceed size limits. It is highly logical to get rid of otherwise useless trash in this fashion, while simultaneously producing energy.

Perhaps someday Southwestern Illinois will find it convenient to make St. Louis its "dumping ground."

Exciting era of opportunity ahead

Guest comment by Mrs. Patricia Bartsokas, chairman of the Belleville Area College of Trustees—The opening of the new Granite City Center of BAC is my proudest moment as a BAC trustee.

The dedication ceremony Aug. 11, 1983, is the beginning of an exciting future for GCC and for the entire community college district of which it is a part.

This is what your community college is all about—providing opportunity and service, close to home—providing quality education at a reasonable cost to you, the student, and to you, the taxpayer.

We hope the dedication of the new center will mark an exciting beginning for the community as well as the college.

The union between a community college and the people of its district means expanded educational, cultural and social opportunities.

Granite City Center, because of the public's support, can begin this fall to train people of all ages in new skills needed for new jobs.

This center will stand as an example of what a community can do when it works together, when it has a vision to strive for excellence, and when it is not afraid to reach out to embrace new ventures with confidence.

Industry development progressing

Alton Telegraph commentary—The possibility of establishing a business, industry and labor special service area has been proposed by President J. Neil Admire of Lewis & Clark Community College in his first official meeting with the college board.

The National Conference of Legislatures, meeting in San Antonio, discussed ways to help small firms do business overseas under new legislation. And states were urged to foster more economic development, including low-interest bonds to encourage business development.

SHUE, the state of Illinois and the federal government all are in the campaign, as well as Lewis & Clark and city and county governments.

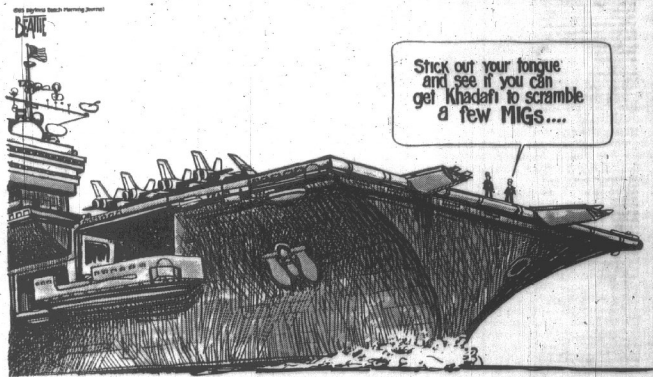

In Granite City, a manufacturer seeking a plant location said the work force is what sold him on the area, despite the unfattering image of Illinois as an industrial state with greedy labor forces.

Ford Cauffiel, chairman of Cauffiel Machinery of Toledo, said his firm will open a steel processing plant and needs the skills available; his company is negotiating to use an unused plant in Granite City. And another steel company, Heidman Steel, is building in Northgate Industrial Park, expecting to open in December.

Admire is hoping to develop an "assistance center" which can help laid-off employees obtain counseling and redirect their lives, through retraining or seeking other employment.

State and federal programs will be directing dollars to groups geared up and available to help. The college and SUE will be major parts of the effort to help people retool and get back in the work force.

The proposal fits in with Admire's effort to develop strategic planning and review all college programs and missions to fine-tune them for the '80s.

Quad-Cityans shopping at Crossroads Plaza Sunday were asked if they thought the United States should be concerned about Libyan President Colonel Khadafi's recent aggression in Northern Africa. Their reactions follow:

Cleveland Cox, Granite City

"Definitely not. I don't think we should be over there. I think the U.S. sticks its nose in too many places as it is. There may come a time when we should interfere with Khadafi but I don't think this is the time. Yes, I think you could say we're antagonizing him."

Jay Laird, Granite City

"Yes, I think so. Why? Because it think it's time that we do something about him. The guy's been a sore on our skin for some time. If we stand by and let him take Chad, he'll be set up in central Africa. As for the Navy being there, I think we're in the Mediterranean for the wrong reasons."

Gerri Gavlick, Granite City

"No I don't think we should interfere with him. I don't think it's our problem. However, I do think we should keep an eye on him."

Paul Erhard, Granite City

In my personal opinion — yes, I think we should be watching him. If we don't, he could upset the balance of power in that area and things could really get worse. As for us having ships in the Mediterranean, we have a legal right to be there. As a member of the NATO pact we should be there monitoring Khadafi or any other aggressor."

Disarmament an ancient, and tragic, story

To the Editor:

In the peace movement on both sides of the Atlantic is preemptive disarmament, or disarmament by example.

The strength of this theme varies from the outright unilateralists in Great Britain, who want to purge their country of all nuclear weapons, to the American advocates of a nuclear freeze.

A common denominator is the notion that, even if the men in Moscow turn a blind eye and deal ear to disarmament, western nations ought to show the way.

Sooner or later, so the reasoning runs, Soviet leaders will yield to the logic of reining in nuclear arms and/or be shamed into following the western lead.

When the dangers of one-sidedness are described to peace movement members, the standard refrain is: "Why not try something that has not been tried before? Besides, what conceivably could be more dangerous than a continuing nuclear arms race?"

It is true enough that history is not exactly bulging with examples of unilateral disarmament. This suggests that even nations not particularly noted for the wisdom of their statecraft did not stray into the ultimate folly. There is one recorded example, but we have to go far back into antiquity.

The story begins in 149 B.C. when Rome and Carthage had logged nearly 100 years of cold and hot war.

But now the Carthaginians, prosperous in the pursuit of trade and weary of the sacrifices of conflict and confrontation, debated the question: "Why continue?"

Should they "expose their country to war and its terrors or, not daring to face the attack of the enemy, yield unresistingly to every demand?"

The Carthaginians opted to sue for peace. They entered into negotiations with the Romans, who opened with the demand for 300 children of the noblest Carthaginian families as hostages. If the Carthaginians complied and promised to obey their orders in other respects, the freedom and autonomy of Carthage would be preserved.

The Carthaginians obliged, amid the laments of bereaved mothers who, according to Appian, predicted "that it would profit the city nothing to have delivered up their children."

The next Roman demand followed: "If you are sincerely desirous of peace, why do you need arms? Come, surrender to us all your weapons and engines of war, both public and private."

The Carthaginians complied, turning over the complete armor for 200,000 men, innumerable javelins and 2,000 catapults, along with the ships of their navy. Had not the Romans promised to respect their freedom and autonomy?

Then came the ultimatum from Rome, which read in part: "Bear bravely the remaining command of the Senate. Yield Carthage to us, and betake yourselves where you like within your own territory at a distance of at least 10 miles from the sea, for we are resolved to raze your city to the ground."

Despite the entreaties of Carthaginian ambassadors, the Romans refused to soften the ultimatum.

The news triggered a "scene of blind, raving madness" in Carthage. This was understandable, for the Carthaginians were asked to give up not only their city, but their vaulted livelihood in the tradewinds of the Mediterranean.

And did not the strident voices in the Roman Senate testify to Roman disunity, notwithstanding Cato the Elder's thunderings: "Carthage must be destroyed!"

History records that the Roman Empire did collapse under the weight of its surfeit and internal contradictions. But by the time this transpired—five centuries later—it was of no help to the Carthaginians.

WALTER F. HAHN
U. S. Strategic Institute

In desperation, despite their lack of arms, the Carthaginians declared war on Rome. For three years, fighting with makeshift weapons, they resisted the siege of their city, but the odds against them proved too great.

The Romans took Carthage and obliterated the city, selling the surviving Carthaginians into slavery.

There is a footnote to the story. In the Carthaginian debates over the best course to follow vis-a-vis Rome, the pro-accommodation faction had argued, among other things, that surely Rome's appetite for conquest was satisfied and that the Romans undoubtedly wanted succor from the protracted conflict as much as did Carthage.

And did not the strident voices in the Roman Senate testify to Roman disunity, notwithstanding Cato the Elder's thunderings: "Carthage must be destroyed!"

History records that the Roman Empire did collapse under the weight of its surfeit and internal contradictions. But by the time this transpired—five centuries later—it was of no help to the Carthaginians.

Says some doctors don't listen to patients

To the Editor:

For some time, I have been wondering, is the modern day physician dedicated to relieve suffering humanity of their pain and sickness or their cash?

When you go to a doctor you engage him to work for you. But does he listen? Does he really hear what you are telling him?

Recently, I have observed two situations. One was my sister who was becoming worse by the day. She got to the point where she was taking 46 different kinds of medicine, she walked with crutches, half her body was numb, she lost weight and couldn't eat solid foods.

When she had a reaction to a medication, she was given another pill for the reaction and this kept going on. I brought her to my doctor. He got her withdrawn from all this prescribed medicine and after some surgery her numbness left. She threw her crutches away and eats anything she wants on three pills a day and one is a vitamin.

My 21 year old nephew injured his back down home. The doctor said there was nothing he could do about it. He did not refer him to any other doctor. After months of suffering, he committed suicide because the pain was unbearable.

Recently here, I observed a friend who had major surgery. She was put on medicine which makes it impossible for her food to stay down, and she gets weaker. Calls to the doctor are not answered. Calls to the answering service bring no response. How simple it would be to give her a different type of medicine which her body could handle and allow her to eat and rest.

People ought to be made aware that medication that makes them sick out to be changed and insist on it.

Thank God my doctor is exceptional. He listens. I can reach him anytime. As he told me he knew his job was a 24-hour-a-day job when he went into it.

The theme of the conference, "Our Home in Today's World," was used by the Rev. Gary Oliver for the Sunday evening inspirational message. Pre-conference entertainment was provided by organist Arthur Birkby at the university's 3,300-pipe organ.

Keynote speaker was Dr. James Kern, who addressed the topic, "Helping Ourselves to Better Help Them" at the opening session.

Thyra Thomson, Wyoming's secretary of state, brought the message, "Pearls and Politics," at the closing session. Richard Flint, president of "Paternalism Now," was a guest at the conference and lectured on personal development and leadership.

Continuing the tradition begun in 1982 in Ohio, children and youth activities were planned during this second family conference. Tours for spouses of homemakers were planned for various interests.

Learning sessions and fun shops attended by the local homemakers considered varied topics, including, "Create Your Own Designs," "Embroider the British Way," and "Home Security." A walking tour of the Coe Library was taken.

"Wild West Days" came alive as "Wyoming Night" featured sideline activities of backpacking, sheep shearing and square dancing, followed by "grub" from the chuck wagon.

Concluding the evening was entertainment in the "Dome on the Range" by the Chugwater Philharmonic and the Timberline Express. Tours included a day at Cheyenne Frontier Days and Rodeo, and the state capital and museum. Other activities were the regional banquets and the awards program with an added Western Style Show. The 1984 annual conference will be in Louisville, Ky.

The game remained tied until the 11th inning, when Jim Draper of McDonald's reached base on an error.

Gaylon Harris followed with a home run in the sixth, and the rally kept going when Ray Harris' grounder to the right side of the infield eluded the Red Sox for an infield single.

McDonald followed with a two-run single to make the score 3-2. Although the Red Sox still were ahead, Robbins said Harris' infield hit keyed the McDonald's comeback.

"It was the turning point of the game," Robbins said. "We should've been out of the inning with no runs scored and still ahead 3-0."

But the Red Sox were only ahead by a run going into the seventh, and wasn't enough. Schaus started the winning rally for McDonald's when he reached base on a dropped fly ball.

Kenny Wilson walked and Yount reached on another Red Sox error before Draper singled to center.

Two runs probably would have scored on the single, but all four baserunners came around when the ball eluded center fielder Dan Hamels. Hamels charged the ball for a throw to the plate, but the ball skipped under his glove.

Robbins scored one run in the first when Robbins reached base on a fielder's choice and went to third on a throw by Ficker who John Russell tripled to score Robbins, but the Red Sox could not bring Russell in from third base.

Robbins then accounted for Red Sox' other two runs by homering to left with a man on.

Schaus started the nightcap for McDonald's and went three innings below, giving way to Ficker who finished up and posted the win.

With the two losses, the Red Sox finish the regular season at 15-18.

Percy has big funding lead

By Robert Estill

WASHINGTON — Sen. Charles Percy has nearly 32 times more money in his campaign treasury than Rep. Tom Corcoran, his rival for the GOP Senate nomination, had at the mid-year point.

Percy, who is seeking a fourth six-year term, had $609,861.96 in his war chest on June 30, the deadline for campaign disclosure reports filed with the Federal Election Commission and Congress.

Corcoran of Ottawa, had $19,249.71 in the bank at the same date, according to the records.

Percy started off with a big boost early in January fund raising in Chicago headlined by President Reagan that Percy aided in the campaign for Illinois' March 20 primary election.

He also has received little funding from anti-abortion groups, which with Percy's record. But Mattoon said the "pro-life" groups have made it clear they plan to help Corcoran with "independent expenditure" aimed at unseating Percy.

There is no limit on the amount of money an organization can spend on independent expenditures, campaign help that the law requires to be given without consultation with the candidate.

However, political action committees (PACs) for special interests are limited by law to giving a candidate no more than $5,000 in the primary and $5,000 in the general election. The ceiling for donations by individuals is $1,000 per candidate for the primary and another $1,000 for the general election.

Don Mattoon, Corcoran's administrative aide, estimated that Corcoran had raised about $400,000 since the June 30 cut-off date for the reports.

He said about $35,000 of that was raised in response to Corcoran's mailings to pro-Israel contributors unhappy with Percy's Middle East record.

Mattoon said they have sent out about 70,000 such fundraising letters and expect to send out 250,000 within the next two or three weeks.

Corcoran, a conservative who has accused Percy of being too liberal, has not received much money from conservative groups. Mattoon contended that "because the conservatives are just a little slow to get cracked up for Illinois' March 20 primary election."

More will join Social Security

Starting next January, several million more people will join the 9 out of 10 working Americans who now pay into Social Security.

Legislation last April covered newly hired federal workers, some current federal employees, and employees of nonprofit organizations who were not already under the program.

In addition, state and local government groups that had dropped out can voluntarily elect to be covered again. This was not possible under the old law.

"If you are affected by this change, you and your family should know more about Social Security — what it is, how it works, who can get benefits and how, and where to get more information," a spokesman said today.

"To begin with, Social Security is much more than a retirement program that provides monthly checks and Medicare protection for older people. It also pays disability and survivors' benefits to people of all ages."

"Some payments — such as those to surviving children — can be paid after you have been under the program as little as 1½ years."

"Social Security coverage moves with you. Since most employment and self-employment is covered under Social Security, any and all credits earned can count toward future benefits — even if you change jobs or occupations often."

"Benefits will increase automatically with the January check each year if the cost of living has risen at least 3 percent. The increase for January 1984 is 3.5 percent."

"If most or all of your income is from Social Security, you will pay no federal or state income tax on the benefits. But if you have substantial income from investments and other sources, part of the benefits in 1984 and later may be subject to federal tax."

Glass jars and gasoline don't mix

By GERALDINE BOWER
Area Extension Adviser

If you're a homeowner who has a tendency to store gasoline in glass jugs — don't! By getting rid of glass jugs after you've used them, you'll lessen the chances of an accident with gasoline.

Jugs that once held milk, cider, disinfectant or other liquids often end up as gasoline storage containers. And that's where the trouble starts.

Here's why a glass jug isn't suited for gasoline storage: First, glass breaks easily.

Second, if a gasoline-filled jug is in or near a fire, it will crack or explode, even on how tight the cap fits and how much fuel it contains. In either case, it makes a bigger fire.

The solution is to use a metal can for fuel storage. When you buy a new one, spend a little more for a safety-type can. A safety can has a spring-loaded lid that will close automatically if the can is dropped.

"The lid also allows for expansion of the fuel without damage to the can."

Make sure the can is painted bright red and has the word "gasoline" printed plainly on the side, to signify caution to persons who may be handling the container.

'Rose' marks 25 years working for the same boss

Twenty-five years on the job is really not that big of a deal unless...

You are a waitress and, particularly when you're a waitress for 25 years for the same boss, who has changed restaurants three times.

On Monday, Aug. 1, Mrs. Rosalia Gum of Granite City, better known as "Rose," had been employed by Charlie Hester 25 years.

Rose was "chief cook and bottle washer" at the Nickelplate Railroad when on Aug. 1, 1958, she went to work at the Cardinal Tavern in Madison, operated by Hester. From there to Ralph & Charles in Madison, to Luna Cafe in Mitchell to the present location, Charlie's, 3120 Nameoki Road.

Rose recalls the Cardinal Tavern. "We served full meal there and sandwiches. I worked from 4 p.m. until closing, which, back then, could be the next morning."

"I remember the Cardinal Tavern had eight tables and everything was easy to reach. "We had a lot of truckers and we got to know them. It's important to know your customers in any restaurant," she explained.

"You get to know what they like to eat and drink. You can make them feel at home."

"Besides, you can wait on them faster. "The better the service, the bigger the tips. I like to serve people the way I would like to be served when I go some place to eat."

"Most people are nice and if you are pleasant, the customer is too. Sometimes you don't feel like being pleasant, but you just have to bite your tongue and make the customer think you're a professional," Mrs. Gum.

She became a widow in October, 1959. She is proud of her two sons, Richard, who lives in Alton, and Eugene, who lives in Monroe, La. Spelling her seven grandchildren is her favorite pastime.

She moved to Granite City at age 9 making her a 58-year resident.

Mrs. Gum is a member of St. Elizabeth's Parish and attended St. Joseph's School as a child.

When asked about staying with Hester for 25 years, Rose smiled and said,

"We've had some ups and downs, but I don't think there is a better boss anywhere."

Hester is a self-made man. He began as a caddy boy and graduated to frying hamburgers at the old Royal Sandwich Shop, formerly at 20th and State streets, while in high school.

Proceeds of the bond and note sales are used to provide below-market loans to private nonprofit and limited-dividend developers of multi-family housing — in conjunction with federal subsidy programs — and to first-time home-buyers under the recently enacted special program.

The 16 multi-family developments include Town and Country Apartments, receiving $4.3 million for 121 new units of housing for families and the elderly. The project is nearing completion on Parkway Drive.

All units are subsidized under the Section 8 program, wherein qualified tenants pay 25-30 percent of their incomes for rent, with the federal government paying the balance.

HELPING THE BOSS prepare the salad before lunch hour, Rose Gum, right, does what she has been doing for 25 years, aiding Charlie Hester. "People like their salads fresh and crisp and that's how I like to serve them. In the old days, it was hard to keep lettuce crisp in 100-degree weather, but that is not the case today with all this modern refrigeration," she noted.

Town and Country Apartments among 16 subsidized projects

A 45 percent increase in the production of housing units for lower income families, the elderly and the handicapped was announced by the Illinois Housing Development Authority for fiscal 1983, which ended June 30.

J. W. Kiley, director of the state's housing finance agency, said 2,107 new and rehabilitated apartments and townhouses were started in 16 developments throughout the state during the year, compared with 1,449 units in eight developments for fiscal 1982, all under the authority's multi-family housing program. One of the projects is in Granite City.

Kiley noted it was the third highest annual loan volume in IHDA's history, mortgage loans totaled $97.7 million, compared with $73.3 million the previous year.

In addition, 981 single-family homes were financed by the authority with below-market-rate mortgage loans under a new IHDA program launched to aid first-time homebuyers. Kiley said a total of $35.2 million was loaned under the program until the general decline in interest rates eliminated the benefit of the 12.95 percent mortgages offered by the authority through 40 participating banks and savings institutions throughout Illinois.

IHDA is a public-benefit corporation established by the General Assembly in 1967 to stimulate housing production through the sale of its own tax-exempt

Buses chartered for March on Washington

The Association For Non-Violent Social Change of America (ANSAC), the official support organization for the Martin Luther King Center in Atlanta, Ga. has reserved buses on Aug. 26 for concerned citizens, coalitions, religious and other human rights organizations in St. Louis to march on Washington, D.C. on the 20th Anniversary of the Historic March on Washington, Aug. 28, 1963.

Reverend Sterling Lands, president of ANSAC, announced at a recent community forum, "We are anticipating taking 5,000 people for the March on Washington. This effort is being coordinated through the Bi-State Mobilization Coalition, made up of human rights, civil, religious and other grassroots organizations from St. Louis and East St. Louis."

There have been many St. Louis organizations participating the march, including the St. Louis Labor Council AFL-CIO's Robert Kelley (Labor Council president) urging participation. "We feel the march for jobs, peace and freedom is an excellent way for the labor movement to express our concerns over the unemployment to march with our friends of labor for ERA, for voting rights, for democratic rights, for social services and better education for our children," he said.

In an address to a large St. Louis audience this June, Martin Luther King III said, "We must be inspired by the dream of my father 20 years ago, with your support, on Aug. 27, we will bring together a new coalition of conscious to place our agenda for jobs, peace and freedom before the lawmakers. This is the beginning of an exciting revitalized nonviolent movement and a new era of social activism."

For more information on the Aug. 27 March on Washington, or bus departure ($75 round trip), interested persons may contact Wesley Hurt, mobilization coordinator, 1-314-721-2332.

Control of ants a problem in county

By RON CORNWELL
County Farm Adviser

With the hot, dry weather, ants are an increasing problem in some lawns. In some cases, they are finding their way inside of homes.

Now would be a good time to spray the outside foundation of your home with Diazinon. This will help prevent the movement of insects into the home.

In addition to spraying the foundation, spray a strip of soil adjacent to the foundation.

If you locate ant colonies in the lawn area, treat these areas with Diazinon. This should control the ant problem in the lawn area.

If you need to treat the inside of the home for ant control, use a half-percent, ready-to-use spray of Diazinon, Dursban or Baygon on the baseboard, cracks and doorway thresholds.

Bill Seebold wins, but Mike isn't as fortunate

By ROGER KRAMER
of the Press-Record

ST. LOUIS — Bill Seebold, a former Granite City resident, won the Formula 1 final race at the St. Louis World Championship Grand Prix Boat Races Sunday, but the eldest of the racing Seebold family wasn't exceedingly happy.

Seebold's son, Mike, entered his first powerboat race since a near-fatal accident in Portsmouth, Ohio, nearly a year ago. For 49 laps, Mike was running a distant but steady fourth behind his father. On the 50th lap, it appeared that tragically nearly struck the Seebold family again.

Bill Seebold was running on the inside of the first turn, trying to lap his son, and Mike appeared to be out of the way of any driver who wished to pass him. However, Lee Sutter, a close friend of the Seebold family, accidentally struck Mike's boat on the left side and dumped it over.

The elder Seebold did not see the accident at first, but he heard what happened over the radio. When he pulled around to the turn, Bill stopped his boat and asked Mike if he was all right.

Bill feared the worst, but Mike was all right. Mike was floating feet up on the water. He was shaken, but he wasn't injured. Bill went on to win.

"I was definitely going to stop to see if he was all right," Bill Seebold said. "If he was injured, I wasn't going to win a stupid race while my son was injured. I saw him almost bleed to death a year ago, and I didn't want that to happen again. I would never run and try to win knowing my son is injured."

"I don't know if he's ever going to get to go out in a boat anymore after this. It's unfortunate it had to happen to him. He was very nervous about going out there because of the injury last year. I just couldn't believe it when I heard about it. Our family's luck is either crash-and-burn or win it all. We don't have an in-between," Bill said.

After Sunday's race, Mike Seebold, the 1982 St. Louis Grand Prix and Busch Cup winner, was uncertain about his racing career. Mike constantly talked to his opponents about the accident and received encouragement to stick with racing. The younger Seebold even shared a smile with some of the racers, but a slight degree of fear showed through the smile.

"I don't know when I'm going to race again. I'm just going to play it by ear. I'm going to miss at least the next two races. I just don't know when I'm going back," Mike said.

In two weeks, the National Powerboat Association was scheduled to go back to Portsmouth for one of its several Grand Prix series races. Mike Seebold had no plans to go back to Portsmouth.

During a practice run last year at Portsmouth, another driver ran right into Mike's boat and left a deep cut in his right leg. Last July, Mike needed 30 stitches in his chin after another accident.

"I thought I was out of the way. I didn't see Lee coming, and I don't think he saw me coming. I was confident about the way I was running, and I could have finished third or fourth," Mike said.

The elder Seebold was bitterly disappointed for his son. "I'm very upset he had to go out like that. He was running a fantastic race. It was relieved that he wasn't hurt."

Despite the disappointment about the accident, Bill Seebold ran one of his strongest races of the year to win the Formula 1 race. He won the first heat of the Formula 1 races early Sunday afternoon, nine seconds ahead of Gene Thibodeaux of Houston, Texas.

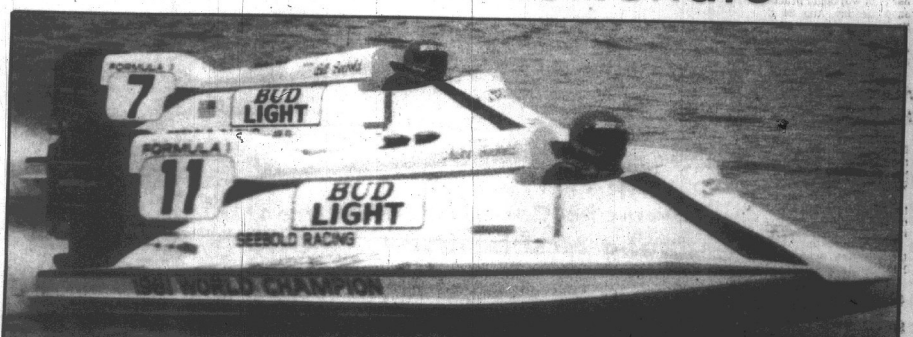

Because of his win the heat race, the elder Seebold had the pole position in the one-hour marathon.

"We knew Gene was going to be tough, so it was important we got the pole position. I was able to go ahead while he was boxed in for a little while by the slower races. I was never more than a half-lap ahead, and any mistake on my part may have given him the win," Bill said.

Seebold, who had up to a 12-second lead on Thibodeaux prior to his son's accident, had to change his strategy after the accident.

In races in fronton, Ohio, and Little Rock, Ark., Bill's engine blew in the final four minutes of the race. He had enough of a lead after the yellow to slow things down to prevent an engine blowout.

"Having the pole position really helped because all I had to do is stay ahead. I slowed down in the last five minutes of the race to keep my engine from blowing, but I would have run harder if I had too," Bill said.

"It still was too close to make a mistake. I could have lost it had made even a small mistake," he added.

Bill's average speed for the 77-lap event was 94.905 miles per hour. His son's accident, the only accident in the finals, caused the yellow flag to stay out for 13-laps and slowed down the race.

Seebold finished 14 seconds ahead of Thibodeaux in the finals. Julie Corbetta finished third, four laps behind Seebold and Thibodeaux.

Tim Seebold, the 19-year-old son of Bill Seebold, was unlucky in the Formula 1000 division.

Tim finished 18th in the race and did not complete the race because of engine problems. He couldn't complete any of Saturday's heat races in the Formula 1000 division.

"It was just a bad day overall for the Seebold family," Bill concluded.

Popmarkoff, Parker recruited by GCC

By ALAN L. GERSTENECKER
Sports Editor
of the Press-Record

GRANITE CITY — Just when it appeared that most of the "blue chip" athletes had all been signed and accounted for, the Granite City Center, Granite City's fledgling junior college signs two outstanding athletes.

Those two athletes are Granite City's Phil Popmarkoff and Collinsville's Marc Parker.

To Granite City residents, Popmarkoff's story is a familiar one. But Parker's, although as equally successful, may not be as familiar.

Both regarded as premier athletes in their respective sports, Popmarkoff and Parker are among the best in Illinois.

Popmarkoff, a member of Granite City South's state championship soccer team, becomes the eighth Granite Cityan to be recruited by GCC soccer coach Larry Petri.

Parker, a three-year varsity member of Collinsville's basketball squad, becomes Coach Larry Graham's ninth recruit.

For Popmarkoff, a striker-forward and the Warriors' leading scorer last year with 15 goals and four assists, his story is one of both good and bad news.

The soccer savvy 18-year-old was slated to attend the University of Central Florida. Everything appeared to be set. He had been contacted by their coach, a packed. All that remained was a formal notice of acceptance.

Well, things didn't come as soon as they should have and Popmarkoff waited, and waited. Until last week when he found out that he had finally been accepted, but then the bad news. While he had been waiting for a notice of acceptance, his scholarship was no longer available.

And that's when Petri began talking to Popmarkoff about attending the Granite City Center.

"I heard through the grapevine that he was having some trouble with Florida so I gave him a call," Petri said. "After that, it was up to Phil."

Feeling a little rejected by UCF, Popmarkoff wasted little time in accepting Petri's offer. There were a lot of pluses to accepting Petri's offer. Popmarkoff said he was looking forward to being able to stay at home while attending college. Although, he admits, he had been "sorta looking forward to going away."

Briefly, Popmarkoff's misfortune turned out to be Granite City's good fortune and Petri makes no bones about it. "Hey, I'm not going to say I'm sorry that things didn't work out for him in Florida, because honestly I'm not," Petri said. "We're getting a prize recruit in Popmarkoff."

A prize recruit is just about the same way Graham described Parker.

"Getting Marc is a big plus for us and our program," Graham said. "He's the kind of player any coach would be both proud and lucky to recruit."

Like most coaches Graham recruits according to positions he needs to fill. He needed an outside shooter and that's when he came to Parker.

At 6 feet 3 inches tall, Parker's forte is his outside shooting.

A three-year starter for the Kahoks, Parker averaged 15 points a game his senior year, his best performance coming against Lincoln in Sectional play when he scored 23 points.

A guard for Coach Gene Catalpa's cage squad, Parker also considers himself a good rebounder. Statistics show he averaged nearly six rebounds per game.

Admittedly, Parker said attending the GCC was not his first choice. He had hoped to attend Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville but when SIUE decided to cancel its basketball program, he changed his mind about Edwardsville. Although he wouldn't rule out Edwardsville in the future.

A good student (3.8 on a 4.0 grade scale), Parker said he is planning his curriculum around dentistry. SIUE currently has a dental school in Alton.

"Actually, I was considering SIUE before they announced they were going to drop its basketball program. When they did that I was thinking about McKendree (College in Lebanon) or Granite City," Parker said.

"I think I could have gone anywhere around here, but after talking to Graham I decided on Granite City."

"I like Graham's style of basketball, up and down the floor. He's very successful and I'm looking forward to playing for him," Parker said.

A talented, complete basketball player, Parker has amassed several honors. His junior year, he was selected to the All-Tourney Team of the Collinsville Tournament and the All-Southwestern Conference Team. His senior year he was named an Honorable Mention to the All-State Team as well as being named to the All-St. Louis Globe-Democrat and News-Democrat basketball squads.

Ironically, though, basketball is not where Parker has made his biggest impact in the state ranks. Just last June, he and a handful of other Kahoks finished second in the state basketball tournament.

Illinoisville's starting shortstop, Parker ended the season with a .375 batting average.

"I love both basketball and baseball, but if I had to put one over the other, it'd have to be basketball over baseball," Parker said.

He admitted he'd like to play both basketball and baseball, but GCC doesn't offer baseball and besides, he said, "I'm going to college to get my education. I don't know if I could handle academics and two sports."

Parker is the son of Kathy and Jack Parker of Collinsville. His father was assistant baseball coach at Granite City High School North.

Popmarkoff, an undecided major, is the son of George and Phyllis Popmarkoff of Granite City.

In Invitational Tournament

Nenninger, Van Buskirk win net titles

Sunday afternoon, the Granite City Park District's annual Invitational Tennis Tournament concluded with the championship finals.

Winning the men's singles title for the second consecutive year was Dan Nenninger who posted a 7-6, 5-1 victory over Jim Claywell in the finals.

For Nenninger, 23, it was the first time in four matches that he's ever defeated Claywell.

"I've played him three times before and never won. This was a big win for me," Nenninger said.

"My tennis has really been coming on the last three months. I've improved a lot."

Nenninger, by anyone's standards, was a good tennis player last year when he last won the Invitational title. But, this year, he says, "I'm twice as good."

"I've really been working hard on my game lately, taking it seriously," he said.

Tennis competition yesterday in the men's finals was nothing but serious. Each player, Nenninger and Claywell, hit excellent, bullet shots, just inches over the top of the net.

The first set was pretty close, each broke once, but Nenninger broke again late in the set and held his post to the win.

In the second set, as the sun got higher in the sky, Nenninger played with increased intensity, allowing Claywell just one successful service game.

"I've been working on my returns lately," Nenninger said. "He's got a good serve and I knew if I was to have a chance against him I had to break his serve. I think I surprised him when I kept returning his serve," he said.

In girls' competition for the same age, Brandy Hagan defeated Gina Doisy 6-4, 6-1 to win that championship.

In boys' 16 years and under competition, Rick Kuehnel defeated Ed Ables 6-4, 7-6 to win that championship.

Kuehnel earned a berth into the championship round with a 6-3, 6-0 victory over David Kelly.

In girls' 16 singles competition, Lori McHenry defeated Amy Buscher in straight sets 6-4, 6-4.

Shelly Piquard, the second seed in the girls' under 18 competition defeated Lori Zupancic, that group's top seed, 6-1, 6-0, posting a stunning victory.

In boys' under 18 competition, Brock Borman defeated Doug Dawson 6-3, 6-4 to secure the championship.

In juniors' doubles competition, Brandy Hogan and Kim Grandicola teamed to defeat Wendy Smith and Laura Voellinger 6-1, 6-2 to win the girls' under 18 championship.

In girls' under 16 doubles competition, Christi and Debbie Grandicola picked up a championship the easy way as Kim Lay and Gina Dungey lost by default.

In girls' under 18 doubles, Lori McHenry and Shelly Piquard defeated Angie Stacey and Kim Zupancic in straight sets to win that doubles championship. The McHenry-Piquard duo won 6-4, 6-1.

In boys' under 16 doubles competition, Granite City's Robbie Lombardi and David Lipe teamed to defeat Ed Ables and Kelly 7-5, 4-6, 7-6.

In the final juniors' doubles match, Brock Borman and Rick Kuehnel teamed to down Steve Sierthman and John Argosio 2-6, 6-2.

Tournament director John Van Buskirk estimates that 130 persons competed in the invitational tournament.

WINNING FORM. Dan Nenninger displays the kind of form that catapulted him to the men's championship title of the Granite City Invitational Tennis Tournament Sunday. Nenninger defeated Jim Claywell to win the championship for the second consecutive year.

Twinbill losses to Edwardsville leaves GC Chiefs in league's cellar

By BELINDA CONLEY
of the Press-Record

EDWARDSVILLE — "We're not a bad team, but walks and errors kill us every time" was the way Granite City Chiefs manager Dennis Gurkin described his team's performance Sunday as they lost two games to the Edwardsville Nationals in Inter-City League play at Hoppe Field in Edwardsville.

Although both teams got five hits in the first game, the Nationals were presented with five walks, and won the game 8-1. The second game was much more lopsided. The Nationals pounded the Chiefs for the game 20-1.

The walks haunted the Chiefs from the beginning of the first game. In the first inning, Chief pitcher Ken Crawford didn't give up any hits, but walked four batters. Edwardsville capitalized on the walks, scoring two runs.

The Nationals did not score in the second, in fact it was the only inning of the day in which they did not score.

The Nationals did score in the third, however. Mike Robertson tripped down the left field line and scored on an error by Chief first baseman Dennis Gurkin (the younger).

Brian Kabbas started the scoring in the fourth. He doubled, advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored on Clausen's single to right field. Clausen came home on a triple by Mueller.

Robertson got his second hit of the game, and scored his third run in the fifth, putting his team ahead 6-0.

Darrell Harris scored the Chiefs only run in the sixth. After doubling down the left field line, Harris stole third and came home on a sacrifice bunt by Milt Roe.

Clausen and Mueller finished up the scoring at 8-1 in the sixth.

The second game started off even worse than the first, and matters did not improve as the game progressed.

Chief pitchers Mike McPherson and Ron Pinkston combined to strike out seven, but they also gave up 22 hits. Robertson was the outstanding hitter of the game going 4 for 5, scoring four runs including one home run, and knocking in four runs.

The Chiefs had no trouble hitting Edwardsville pitching, but couldn't seem to get run across the plate.

Bruce Nation scored the only Granite City run in the third when he walked and scored on a double by Crawford.

The Nationals on the other hand had no trouble at all scoring.

The Chiefs lost gives them a fourth-place finish which means they must play first place Edwardsville next week in the first round of Inter-City playoffs.

The two teams will play a p.m. double-header next Sunday at Hoppe Field in Edwardsville.

Sports of all Sorts

Of talent and Mexican baseball

By AL BARNES
for the Press-Record

It's funny how sports fans will jump to conclusions, mostly wrong ones.

After a recent 7-Up/Spunky's night game victory, a group of us were quaffing a few Buds in celebration of the guys' success. Someone mentioned how talented, baseball, that is, seemed to run in families, citing the No. 1, of course, of George Sisler and sons, Dick, George, Jr., and David.

A male fan, seated nearby, entered the gab-fest and offered the name of Lanier, Max and Hal, father and son, he claimed. I didn't challenge the guy, although there was a nagging doubt in my mind.

Now, a month or more later, I had reason to check the Laniers out; and, they are, indeed, father and son.

What brought the subject up was the matter of the Mexican League's raid of American Baseball in 1947 and 1948.

The Pasquel Brothers (George went on to become president of Mexico), were the driving force behind the marauding Mexicans. And, the smooth throwing southpaw Max Lanier was their top prize lured away from the St. Louis Cardinals.

Max, who posted a 108-81 mound record in the National League, played down in Mexico during the 1947 and '48 campaigns. The record books, however, as if to expunge the whole thing from the minds of men, fail to list what Lanier and his teammates did down there.

I can't recall the exact date, although it had to be around the first of July, 1949.

Max Lanier, forgiven by an edict of Baseball Commissioner, Happy Chandler, arrived back in St. Louis to rejoin the Red Birds.

I was assigned to cover his return and met Lanier's plane as it set down at Lambert Field. I'll never forget Lanier's walk down the steps of the plane; as he stepped on the grass of the field he suddenly dropped to his knees and bowed his head and kissed the ground.

Max's reaction was largely the same of most other U.S. stars who were lured down Mexico way. Oh, there's no doubting that the fans South of the Border love the game of baseball, but it wasn't meant to be.

Lanier, the elder, was dealt to the New York Giants

On Dec. 11, of 1961, in a move which brought the New York Yankees' shortstop, Eddie Stanky, to St. Louis.

Looking back on the happening, one is struck by the fact that Chandler played a lot of important roles in baseball, but his two main ones, I maintain, was the signing of Jackie Robinson and the lifting of the ban which organized baseball had slapped on players who had dared signed to play the game South of the Border.

I'll never forget how the sight of Max Lanier kissing the ground at the airport moved me. It brought a tear to my eye.

Stadium Run scheduled for October 1

ST. LOUIS—More than 3,500 runners are expected to participate in one of St. Louis' running traditions, the Stadium Run, set for Saturday, Oct. 1.

This year marks the fifth year of the Stadium Run, a unique event which features a handicap start and climaxes with runners crossing the finish line on the playing field at Busch Stadium prior to the St. Louis Cardinals baseball game against the Chicago Cubs.

Sponsored by Budweiser Light beer, Busch Stadium, the Cardinals and the St. Louis Track Club, the 10,000 meter, 6.2-mile run through the streets of downtown St. Louis begins at 11:30 a.m.

The handicap start featured in the Budweiser Light Stadium Run will follow national handicap standards based on age and sex. Depending on those classifications, runners will be allowed to start on half-minute increments (up to 17 minutes) ahead of runners in the prime age group, 24 to 31 years of age.

Each runner participating in the Stadium Run will receive a coupon good for one free general admission ticket or one-half off the price of any reserved seat for the Cardinals game that day against the Cubs, a Stadium T-shirt, running number and refreshments following the run.

The top 150 finishers in the run will receive a variety of prizes and awards including Budweiser Light merchandise. To enter, runners should send an entry form and $4 to the St. Louis Track Club, c/o Tom Eckelman, P.O. Box 2956, University City, MO 63130.

The entry deadline for the Stadium Run is Saturday, Sept. 24. Entries received after Sept. 24 will be returned.

Entry forms for the Stadium Run are available at the St. Louis Cardinals' office at 250 Stadium Plaza, Civic Center Corporation, 200 Stadium Plaza, and at most sporting goods outlets in the St. Louis area. Entry forms may also be obtained by writing the St. Louis Track Club.

Additional information on the 1983 Budweiser Light Stadium Run is available by calling 314-727-SLTC or 314-721-5312.

BARRACUDA! Jimmy Starnes of Granite City caught this 25 pound barracuda July 22 off the coast of Freeport in the Bahamas. The young Starnes used a size 90 hook and a 50 pound test line, to land the fish. For bait he used, what Bahamians call a "wahoo." Starnes and his family were fishing for Marlin and Sailfish when he landed the barracuda.

Poplar Street Bridge opening drops McKinley use slightly

On the average, 3,359 more vehicles per day used the McKinley Bridge in Venice last month than the daily crossing average in July, 1982, Tom Fields, bridge manager, reported to the Venice City Council at its last meeting.

A total of 469,821 vehicles utilized the Venice bridge this July, showing an average of 15,155 travelers each day, Fields said.

Third Ward Alderman John Ervin questioned whether the number of vehicles has declined since repair work is virtually finished on the toll-free Poplar Street Bridge, leading into downtown St. Louis.

Motorists using the local bridge have decreased in number somewhat since the Poplar Street Bridge is back in operation, Fields replied.

All eight lanes now are open on the St. Louis bridge and lengthy traffic tie-ups which aggravated commuters for months, generally have been eliminated, it was learned.

"We're still doing more traffic now than before the other bridge (lanes) was closed," the bridge manager pointed out.

Fields expressed the hope that motorists who have changed their driving patterns by using the Venice bridge to avoid congestion and delays would continue to do so, and that crossing figures would remain relatively higher than prior to the start of the downtown St. Louis bridge's resurfacing projects.

Although arrest figures declined in July, a record total of $2,424 in fines was collected last month and returned to Venice by Circuit Court Clerk Willard Portelli.

The amount of fines collected in July exceeded considerably the $1,096 check returned to the city in June and a total of $1,900 collected in May.

Police Chief Farris Smith reported at Tuesday night's council session that 41 arrests were made in July, including six juvenile arrests.

The largest number of arrests—22—was for city ordinance violations. State traffic violations accounted for 10 arrests.

Four arrests were made for other police departments and two juveniles, arrested for felonies, were referred to juvenile court, Chief Smith said.

Fifty-eight adults and 30 juveniles were arrested in June, including 23 adults and 11 juveniles for city ordinance violations.

Arrest figures in May showed 59 adults and four juveniles were booked on various charges.

Increased vigilance by law enforcement officers, especially in the Weaver Street area, again was requested by Fourth Ward Alderman Victor Valentine Sr., who described the situation as "terrible."

"Kids of all ages are riding bikes all hours of the night and the police go by at 11 and 12 o'clock at night and don't do anything about it. Can't you give them a citation or tell them to get on home or something?" Valentine asked Chief Smith.

"We do write curfew tickets," the police chief replied, adding "But we can't arrest them and take them in."

"How can you tell kids riding bikes to go home if you know there is no one there (at home)," Fourth Ward Alderman Charles Haynes asked.

Alderman Valentine continued, "Every summer we have a curfew thing. We should start giving out more tickets or get after the parents."

"We don't have a law (curfew) on the books and if we don't intend to enforce it, we should take it off the books," he stated.

Mayor Tyrone Echols commented, "Maybe it's time to do like East St. Louis is doing and get tough with the parents. If we are going to forcibly enforce the law, maybe we should look at what we can do against parents," he said.

"If the law (curfew) is a paper tiger then we should get it off the books," Mayor Echols stressed.

He offered to talk with East St. Louis Mayor Carl Officer to find out what headway is being made in that community in response to similar problems.

The Venice mayor also asked City Attorney Lawrence Hartman to research what type of official action and penalties could be applied, regarding parental responsibility, for curfew violations.

The situation on Weaver Street was referred to as "appalling" by a woman in the audience, who addressed the council on behalf of her parents who reside in the vicinity.

"My father has been a taxpayer for 45 years and the most appalling conditions exist outside his area (home)."

"Groups of people are standing around at all hours of the day and night. They use the most foul language and no one seems to care," she told the aldermen.

"My mother just got over a heart attack and I am frightened to let her come back," she said.

"I'm very concerned about young people, having taught school for 35 years, but the situation there is very bad and something should be done."

She also mentioned the mess created by broken glass and other debris around a garbage container belonging to a nearby business firm. "I would think a businessman would want to contain his area," she commented.

Mayor Tyrone Echols sympathized with the speaker, but stated, "We can't post a policeman there all the time. When the police are called and by the time they get there, it (the action) stops and they're gone."

"I can't say it's going to stop, but we can definitely try to do something about it," he said. He invited the speaker to return and report to the council if conditions in that specific area do not improve.

The National Safety Council awards are based on improvements in the number and duration of lost time injuries during the year, in comparison with previous years. The safety performance of award candidates also is compared with national industry averages.

"Kerr-McGee employees' safety record last year was 40 percent better than averages for the industries in which the company has business operations," Cole said.

"All of us who work for Kerr-McGee and its subsidiaries share in this important national award, and we can be very proud that we earned this recognition for our company through our efforts to work more safely as well as productively," he said.

Offer aviation electronics, maintenance degrees here

Belleville Area College's aviation maintenance and aviation electronics programs have been moved to the new Granite City Center of Belleville Area College. Large quantities of engines and equipment have been transferred to GCC.

The programs, which were located at the Pitzman School in Cahokia, have moved in their entirety to the new college facilities and classes will be offered this fall at GCC.

The aviation maintenance program gives students the opportunity to obtain the Federal Aviation Administration airframe and powerplant certificate.

The curriculum of the program emphasizes study of aircraft, powerplants, related systems and accessories, including laboratory work stressing application of theory and recommended industry practices.

The certificate can be earned in one year of study. With an additional semester of classes, students can earn an associate of applied science degree.

The aviation electronics program prepares students for a career as an "avionics technician."

Throughout the program, classroom instruction is coordinated with laboratory experience. Two aircraft will be brought here.

Students can earn an associate of applied science degree following a two-year sequence of courses. The first year of the program is identical to the certificate program.

Fund-raising auction benefit asthmatic boy

Twenty-one-month-old Craig Osterbur is a severe asthmatic.

"He has wheezing episodes every single day," said his mother, Gail Osterbur of Edwardsville. "Craig has never known anything but wheezing and asthma. And it's real sad to me. Some days he can't even cross the street without getting tight and wheezy."

To suppress the intensity and frequency of Craig's attacks, calls for constant medical treatment. However, until recently, the young boy had been admitted to a hospital only once.

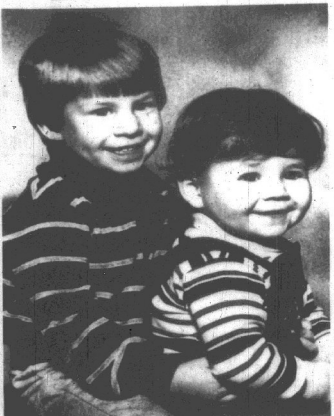

His mother, a clinical instructor for the Intensive Care Unit at St. Elizabeth Medical Center in Granite City, has provided the necessary treatment at home. A day's treatment consists of several oral medicines, which include steroids, and four aerosol treatments.

"He's done a lot better since we've started these aerosol treatments and started him on the steroids. But, it's just that he keeps wheezing. Once we think we've got him out of it, he crashes again," said Mrs. Osterbur, referring to acute attacks.

These attacks require injections of a drug called theophylline. Mrs. Osterbur has learned to do this for her son also.

In early June, however, Craig's doctor, Ray Davis of St. Louis, wanted to determine the cause of Craig's episodes of dependency on steroids, a drug that can affect normal growth.

Dr. Davis recommended sending Craig to a national asthma institute in Denver. Craig and his mother flew to Denver, June 6, Craig stayed. His mother returned.

ASTHMATIC IN NEED. Craig Osterbur, right, is expected to accumulate medical bills in excess of $25,000 in treatment of his severe asthma. Friends have organized a benefit auction Aug. 19 to assist the family in paying the bills. Craig is shown with his brother, Jonathan.

Last week, Craig's seven week separation from his mother and three-year-old brother had ended. All tests were complete.

As a mother, Mrs. Osterbur was thrilled about bringing her son back home. As a nurse, she was not as overjoyed.

Tests had led researchers to conclude that Craig's attacks were provoked by environmental factors—specifically, humidity.

"The Midwest is the worst place I could possibly live," Mrs. Osterbur, a divorcee, said. Dr. Davis has recommended that she move her family out west. "I can, if that's what I have to do. I'm thinking it's my only option at this point. It's not something that I want to do. I don't have any family in this area, particularly. They are up north, the Champaign area, so it's not like I'm bound family-wise. But, I've got a house, friends, a job and a baby-sitter who's worth a million bucks to me. So, it would be a big move."

Mrs. Osterbur's spirit was also dampened by a costly medical bill that resulted from Craig's stay at the Denver institute. In the past, caring for Craig at home has kept medical expenses low, she said. That's not the case any longer. Craig's medical bills are expected to total more than $25,000.

And, Mrs. Osterbur is not sure if her insurance will cover the bill. Asthma may not be a serious enough diagnosis she's been told. When initially contacted, the insurance company's spokesman said "asthma is not good enough," Mrs. Osterbur said.

"It's obvious that they don't live with him. If they lived with him, saw this child try to breathe, they would see that asthma is good enough."

"I didn't want to get slapped with a $30,000 bill, but I didn't feel like I had a choice. Leaving Craig was the hardest thing I ever had to do. I got divorced a year ago and I think my divorce was easier than leaving my son out there. I felt like I was deserting him, even though he's being taken care of."

"So, whether they pay or not, this is still my son I'm talking about. I've got to do anything I can to help."

Apparently others feel the same way. Friends and work associates gave Mrs. Osterbur a $500 check a few days before she and Craig left for Denver in June.

Recently, posters were placed in the surrounding area explaining the Osterbur's circumstances and requesting money contributions.

A fund-raising auction has been scheduled. Many items donated by Granite City and Edwardsville businesses, private individuals and the Edwardsville Chamber of Commerce will be auctioned Friday, Aug. 19 at St. Cecilia Church in Glen Carbon from 7 until 11 p.m., organizers have said.

Venice carnival set as Labor Day event

The Venice Lions Club has announced plans for a Labor Day weekend carnival that will be set up at Lee Park in Venice.

The four-day event is scheduled for Sept. 2 through 5, according to Earl Hogan, Venice Lions' spokesman. The club is inviting any area individual or organization interested in operating booths at the carnival to contact Hogan at 451-9914.

Booths may be rented for $25 for the entire run of the carnival. The rentals are not restricted to Venice residents.

The seven carnival rides planned will include entertainment for both children and adults. Specialty-priced tickets may be purchased in advance from any Lions Club member. Price of the advance tickets is $7.50 for a book of 15 or $2.50 for a page of five tickets.

A book of tickets would regularly sell for $9. Tickets will be priced at 60 cents.

The rides will be open 6 p.m. to midnight each day of the carnival. Booths will open at noon each day.

A disc jockey will play records at least three of the carnival nights from 8 to midnight, according to Hogan.

A Venice Park District softball tournament will be played at the park during the Labor Day weekend.

The park district approved plans for the carnival at its meeting last week.

State Fair continues this week

Illinois State Fair activities continue throughout this week in Springfield.

Tonight, the Charlie Daniels Band and Lacy J. Dalton will perform at 7 and 9:30 p.m. at the grandstand. Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 16 and 17, Willie Nelson will return to the fair for shows at 8 p.m. All $7 tickets are sold out.

Alabama will be on stage at the grandstand Aug. 18, but tickets already are sold out.

A variety of musical entertainment will be provided throughout the fairgrounds for the duration of the fair.

Other annual events also are set for this week including Governor's Day, Aug. 17, and Democrat's Day, Aug. 18.

Several special attractions will run the duration of the fair including the Conservation World, 25-acre exhibit area. The exhibit offers outdoor activities and conservation related displays and wildlife. It is located in the northwest corner of the fairgrounds and is sponsored by the Illinois Department of Conservation. Admission and participation are free.

An expanded program awaits senior citizens at the fair. The Senior Citizen Action Center is providing a host of entertainment, activities and refreshments and is located in the east wing of the Emerson Building. Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Bingo will be played in a tent located inside Gate 2 of the fairgrounds.

Admission is free to all grandstand harness races, Aug. 18-19.

The largest produce contest will be Aug. 16 at 11 a.m., at the Lincoln Stage. On Aug. 17, at 10 a.m., the auctioneers bid calling contest will be at the Lincoln Stage.

The Moo Moo Classic and the Bossy, both dairy-related events, will be in the Coliseum at 12:30 p.m., Aug. 18 and 19. The Moo Moo Classic is a celebrity milking contest to see who can obtain the most milk in a two-minute period. A costume competition for a dairy cow and its owner, called the Bossy, will be judged on the originality, creativity and humor of the outfit.

The Farm Expo will run the duration of the fair and is located near the center of the fairgrounds in the southeast corner of the one-mile race track.

Just across from major improvement dealers will be the Agriculture Tent, featuring displays representing the six divisions of the Illinois Department of Agriculture.

Traditional livestock competition and exhibits also will be offered at the fair. On Aug. 17, the sale of champion livestock will be in the Coliseum at 2 p.m.

Midway rides, assorted food booths and a variety of other scheduled events will continue at the fair through Sunday, Aug. 21.

Prices for grandstand entertainment will be $7, $6 and $4. As in the past, 1,500 tickets will go on sale each morning of the shows for $2 per person.

Regular fair admission is $2 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Persons 15 and younger or 60 and older will be admitted free to the fair. Admission and parking will be free the final day of the fair.

Water slide park topic

The Venice Park District Board of Commissioners met last week and discussed the progress of the water slide project, according to a district spokesman.

Commissioners were told the sale of the bonds, necessary to finance the project, still being investigated.

The commissioners gave permission to the Venice Lions Club to conduct a Labor Day weekend carnival, Sept. 2 to 5, at Lee Park.

The club will not be allowed to sell alcoholic beverages on the park grounds.

LABOR SURVEY NOW UNDERWAY

Local representatives of the Bureau of the Census are conducting a survey of employment in this area during the work week of August 15 to 20, 1983. Marvin L. Postma, director of the bureau's regional office in Kansas City has announced.

The survey is conducted for the U. S. Department of Labor in a scientifically designed sample of approximately 60,000 households throughout the United States. Employment and unemployment statistics based on results of this survey are used to provide a continuing measure of the economic health of the nation.

For example, in June the survey indicated that of the 111.9 million men and women in the civilian labor force, 100.8 million were employed. The nation's unemployment rate was 10.0 percent, down from 10.1 percent the month before.

Information supplied by individuals participating in the survey is kept strictly confidential by law and the results are used only to compile statistical totals.

1983 Mexican fiesta Sept. 17

The Mexican Honorary Commission last week finalized plans for its Sept. 17 fiesta to celebrate the independence of Mexico.

President Joe Becerra said the fiesta will be held at the club hall, 1801 Spruce St., with music by "Los Amigos." Tickets at the door will be $3.50 and Mexican food will be available. The public is invited.

New members introduced were Mark and Shawn Donaldson, Randy and Cindy Hotz, Paul and La Fonda Stoltz and Paul Kacera.

President Becerra announced that the annual MHC picnic would be held at the Army Depot.

Hostesses were Ruby Ybarra and Karen DeCourcy.

SEWING SHORTCUTS WILL BE EXPLAINED

Easy to do and short-cut contemporary sewing techniques will be featured in a 2½-hour program, "Secrets of a Successful Blazer," Sept. 8 at 1 and 7:30 p.m. (the same program presented twice) at the First Baptist Church, 524 St. Louis St. (also Route 157), Edwardsville.

Phyllis Effer, a Denver home economist who has taught the class to over 100 groups in the Midwest, will be the instructor. Sponsor is the University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service.

Benefits restored to veterans' families

The Veterans Administration has been designated to administer restored benefits payments to veterans' spouses and children who lost their benefits under the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1981.

Congress authorized restoration of these benefits to carry out a promise made by the military to service personnel who later died in or as a result of military service.

The VA will pay benefits similar to those eliminated if the eligible person is the survivor of a member or former member of the armed forces who died while on active duty prior to Aug. 13, 1981, or whose death after discharge was the result of a disability incurred in or aggravated by military service before that date.

Student benefits are restored for full-time post-secondary students between the ages of 18 and 22.

Benefits to parents with child-in-care designation will be payable between the youngest child's 16th and 18th birthdays.

Future adjustments to benefits will be based on increases in the VA educational assistance allowance for students and increases in dependency and indemnity compensation for surviving spouses with a child-in-care.

Eligible students should receive their restored benefits this month. Payments will be retroactive to January 1983.

Those eligible for benefits as parents with child-in-care are expected to receive their first checks during October.

FREE MOTORCYCLE RIDING WORKSHOP

A free workshop for Illinois residents on motorcycle riding techniques will be offered at SIUE. Anyone 16 years or older who has a driver's license or learner's permit may enroll. Those under 18 must receive parental permission.

Motorcycles, helmets and insurance are provided for all participants. Four sections of the workshop are offered, starting Aug. 22 and Sept. 6, 23 and 30. Each participant successfully completing the course will receive a Motorcycle Safety Foundation certificate, which is recognized by many insurance companies for premium discount prices.

Barge trip increases support for new port facility in GC

By GARY SCHNEIDER
Press-Record Editor

The massive dimensions of the proposed second port area north of the current Tri-City Regional Port were discussed as area politicians and dignitaries toured the area via water, hosted by the Tri-City Regional Port Authority, Bi-State Development Agency, St. Louis Port Authority and St. Louis Regional Commerce and Growth Association.

About 200 persons were welcomed aboard a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers barge which was pushed by the "Senator Sam" tugboat from Art's Fleeting Service up the Chain of Rocks Canal to the site of the proposed 6,900-foot-long new harbor.

It was explained by Chuck Franco, project study manager for the Corps of Engineers, that the project will involve moving 4 million cubic yards of dirt, moving the current banks back 210 feet. Prior to moving the levy, a new levy must be constructed, requiring one million cubic yards of dirt. Then three million yards will be removed to create the new harbor. Finally, the existing levy will be removed and the dirt returned to the "borrow pit" from which the dirt to build the new levy had been taken.

The new $24 million port, recommended in a Corps of Engineers study one year ago, is expected to cost $24,350,000 in 1982 dollars.

The port is not expected to be constructed in the next few years. It is the second phase of a two-phase Corps plan, the first involving construction of a $3.3 million L-shaped dike upstream of the St. Louis harbor to stop the shifting of the bottom in the port. Only after that project is completed would the second Tri-City Port be started.

After touring the proposed site of the new port, the dignitaries were pushed by the Senator Sam downstream to the St. Louis riverfront to pick up about 40 St. Louis dignitaries.

Carl Ranft, manager of the Tri-City Regional Port, welcomed all aboard and explained the proposed Corps projects. The barge then returned to the upstream area where the L-shaped dike is to be constructed before going further south through the St. Louis port before returning to St. Louis to discharge the Missouri visitors.

Illinois dignitaries then were returned by barge, with the tugboat's namesake, Sen. Sam Vadalabene, driving part of the way, to the Tri-City Regional Port, where they had boarded.

Ranft said the trip only served to keep public support for the port projects high, since the second port would have a significant positive effect on the future of the Quad-City area and the region.

Press-Record Photos by Alan L. Gerstenecker

SIGHTS OF ST. LOUIS from the water as seen by area politicians and dignitaries during a boat tour from the Tri-City Regional Port to the St. Louis port area Thursday afternoon. Clockwise from the top left, photos show the Senator Sam tugboat, which pushed the Corps of Engineers tour barge filled with guests. The Robert E. Lee and the Arch make a nice background as Missouri dignitaries prepare to board the barge for part of the trip. The Tom Sawyer draws attention from the barge. A decaying port facility on the Missouri side of the river shows the danger of ignoring port improvements. And, above, the man for whom the Senator Sam tugboat is a namesake, State Sen. Sam Vadalabene, takes the controls while underway.

Valuable topsoil, habitat is being lost to the wind

by Buck Cunningham
District Wildlife Biologist

The latest version of "Gone With The Wind" centers around neither Scarlett O'Hara nor Rhett Butler. This version stars the environmental entity that is the lifeblood of agricultural productivity—topsoil. Depending upon the soil type and the cropping practices utilized, landowners in Illinois may be losing anywhere from 15 to 25 tons of topsoil per acre to wind erosion each year.

Why is this massive soil loss occurring? Why were we forced last spring to turn on headlights while driving through dust storms? The answer to these questions lies largely in the fact that hedgerows, fence-rows, windbreaks and timbered areas have been cut, burned, bulldozed, or otherwise eliminated to a great extent. Nothing blocks the wind rushing across a field. The problem is compounded significantly if fall moldboard tillage is practiced. The wind then is free to sweep unimpeded across a denuded field, collecting valuable topsoil along its journey, and depositing it in road ditches to hinder the drainage of excessive rain.

It seems paradoxical that we have destroyed—and are destroying—many of the trees and hedgerows and brushy fence-rows planted deliberately by our grandfathers for the main purpose of breaking the wind, and controlling erosion.

What has this destruction actually cost in terms of soil? A figure generally agreed upon by soil conservation experts is $8 for each ton of topsoil lost. This price includes the cost of replacing the soil and the lost nutrients. Erosion, at a rate of 20 tons per acre, will result in a cost of $160 per acre! Add to this the associated work in cleaning road ditches and other costs that soak up tax money, and one confronts a very alarming figure.

Equally as alarming is the effect that the removal of these trees, hedgerows and brushy fence-rows has had on Illinois wildlife. Windbreaks not only help control wind erosion, but they also provide excellent wildlife habitat. The elimination of wildlife habitat, and its relationship to the demise of wildlife, cannot be easily measured in terms of dollars.

Would we not be a poorer society should we experience the loss of our wildlife? Must we assign a dollar value to the life of a ring-necked pheasant, the bobwhite quail, and the meadowlark in order to justify their continued existence? Surely persons with an eye to the future realize that wildlife, and the wise use of the land, hold values transcending the dollar.

The Illinois Department of Conservation is staffed with professional wildlife biologists who are dedicated to the goal of ensuring wise land use, and the continued existence and health of our wildlife. But if we're to be successful, we need you—the landowner, the non-landowner, the hunter, the non-hunter, the conservationist, the taxpayer, the voter—all the people of Illinois. We must all dedicate ourselves to this goal. You can help restore wildlife habitat in some areas, and help preserve the remaining habitat in other areas, and your district wildlife biologist can help. Find out who he is and how to reach him by writing: Department of Conservation, Division of Fish and Wildlife, Resources, 524 S. Second St., Springfield, IL 62706.

Wildlife habitat must be saved, not only to preserve the valuable topsoil, but also for the benefit of animals that comprise an important part of the state's natural heritage. We can't be guilty of not caring, as was Rhett Butler in "Gone With The Wind." We must give a damn about our land, our wildlife, and our future.

Weatherization funds here total $25,000

Two Granite City groups have been awarded a total of $25,000 to perform home weatherization projects for elderly, disabled and low-income residents.

The grants are the first to be made by Illinois Power's (IP) Energy Assistance Foundation. Besides the Granite City, grants totaling $37,500 will be distributed in Bloomington and Galesburg.

Norman Hall, IP said, a $20,000 check will be given to Co-Ordinated Youth Services and a $5,000 check will be presented to Granite City Jaycees at a grant orientation session Thursday.

If the Jaycees' initial program is successful, their grant could be increased to $30,000.

The executive director of the assistance program, Harold E. Powell, will be present at Thursday's meeting to outline application procedures. IP officials expect the local program to be in operation by Sept. 1.

The two groups were selected from among several in the Quad-City area by a local steering committee that has been meeting here for several months to form project guidelines, Hall said.

The income guidelines may not be as restrictive as other weatherization programs because an applicant's monthly expenses may be given more consideration in relationship to his income.

Homes of recipients will be eligible for free insulation and storm windows, and homes that suffer from severe energy loss will be eligible for attic insulation.

In some rare cases, a new furnace will be installed to help participants cope with the wintertime energy consumption, Hall added.

"The program also will involve seminars, including practical demonstrations on how to keep cold air from entering residences.

The Energy Assistance Foundation was formed last September by IP. The funding of $25,000. The grants are to be used to help eliminate causes of high utility bills, such as lack of home improvements or poor energy use habits.

The foundation has been soliciting energy assistance proposals from local social agencies, charitable and community organizations, and other community groups in areas served by the natural gas and electricity utility.

The company will match contributions to the foundation from individuals and organizations, up to another $250,000.

Co-Ordinated Youth has been awarded the maximum energy grant.

Granite City Jaycees are the first service group to be awarded an energy foundation grant. Members will volunteer their time to install the weatherizing materials for persons not physically able to do the work themselves.

"The Energy Assistance Foundation is pleased to be able to help the poor and others defend themselves against rising energy costs," Powell said.

These costs include a $70 million electric rate increase granted to IP last month. Since 1978, the cost of gas to IP customers has increased 124 percent.

Organizations or individuals wishing to make donations or provide support may write to the Foundation, P.O. Box A1749, Decatur 62525.

SPANISH WILL BE TAUGHT LOCALLY

Quad-Cityans can learn Spanish, to earn credits for a degree or for their own enjoyment—at the new Granite City Center of Belleville area College.

Spanish I, an introductory course which covers pronunciation, conversation, grammar and reading, will be offered during the day and evening this fall at GCC. The day class will meet from 1 to 1:50 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The evening class will meet from 7 to 8:50 p.m. Monday and Wednesday.

BURGLAR GETS DRESS

A burglar took a $10 beige dress from the apartment of Nina Crawford, 2201 State St., she reported Thursday.

Project Avalanche is Sept. 23

Project Avalanche will be Friday, Sept. 23, to Sunday, Sept. 25, at Camp Lake Sallateeka in Pinckneyville, Ill.

Project Avalanche is an advanced peer leadership training program with the purpose of bringing together professional resources and teen-agers who have previously experienced peer leadership training programs, like Operation Snowball or the Illinois Teenage Institute on Substance Abuse.

It is founded on the belief that all persons have the capacity to make sound decisions regarding their lives, based on accurate information and an understanding of their selves and motivations. Once provided these skills, teenagers can effect change not only within themselves, but also can affect others.

It is not intended to serve as a therapeutic setting for individuals who are presently experiencing emotional or physical problems which

Scott AFB offers pilot course

Scott Air Force Base personnel who want to learn to fly can do so at the base beginning this fall. Belleville Area College, which has offered only ground school at the base in the past, is initiating a full pilot-training program at the base.

The BAC Board of Trustees paved the way for the program when it approved a contract with the Aero Club earlier this summer.

"This contract means we can do all the flight training at Scott," said BAC Chief Flight Instructor Clarence Hall said.

"The Scott Aero Club will be doing the training as a BAC extension center. I will give the flight tests for licenses, standardization flights to the Aero Club instructors and periodic stage checks to the students."

Instruction will be in Aero Club planes, he said.

"We're offering courses at the base to make it more convenient for the people there," Hall said. "They can save the 45-minute drive to Cahokia."

The college's pilot-training program is based at B-State Airport in Cahokia.

A schedule of classes for this fall is being developed and will be announced soon, Hall said.

Already scheduled is Private Pilot Ground School, which will meet from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturdays for eight weeks beginning Aug. 20 at the Aero Club.

ARREST MAN WITH

NINE WARRANTS

An East St. Louis man was arrested in Venice last week and charged on nine counts issued in warrants that were active against him.

Tony Ford, 25, was seen by a Venice policeman in a car driven by another man. Knowing that Venice police had a warrant against Ford alleging failed theft, police followed the car.

The driver pulled the car over and got out at Bissell Street and Route 3 after being followed several blocks, and asked police why they were after him.

Police said they asked Ford to get out of the car and he was arrested. A can of beer allegedly was found in the front seat of the car so the driver, Clyde D. Coakley, 23, East St. Louis, was charged with illegal transportation of alcohol. He was released after posting his driver's license.

Ford was taken to the Madison County Jail. The warrants charged him with fleeing police, theft, speeding, reckless driving, not having a valid driver's license and four counts of violating a stop sign.

Lease of Nike base on agenda

Leasing of the former Madison County Nike base to a sports car manufacturing company is on the agenda of the August meeting of the Madison County Board at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday.

The Madison County Zoning Board of Appeals recommended after a hearing last week that the Nike missile base be rezoned from public use to M-2 general manufacturing. It is located in Marine Township, along Route Four.

Mills-Glynn, Inc., is seeking to lease the property from the county.

The agenda includes seeking bids for professional janitorial services for county-owned buildings, authorizing United Way payroll deductions, establishing a Madison County para-transit budget and allowing creditable service to Municipal Retirement Fund members returning from the armed forces.

Also, defining budget policies for 1984, setting a date for the annual Road work, petitioning for disconnection of territory and determination of boundaries of sanitary sewer.

Special Service Area One, eliminating easement restrictions on a parcel of property owned by Illinois Power Co. and designating an attorney for the supervisor of assessments and Board of Review.

The regular board session is to be followed by a closed session on negotiations and finance.

Zoning issues to be considered by the County Board from his own farm to yield 70 to 80 bushels per acre, compared to last year's 180-bushel yield. The reason, he said, is the heavy and lack of rainfall. Last year, his fields received six inches of rainfall each in July, July and August. The season's total rainfall on his farm so far was only 2.5 inches, he said.

"When you get used to a 134-bushel average statewide, anything less than that is bad news," Worries said.

In comparison to Illinois, Worries said, the Corn Belt in the western United States is in good shape.

Worries said, "approaching the stage we were in a week ago - it doesn't have the stress conditions that we have here," Worries said.

"For some reason, we're being singled out. Maybe it's pointing out to everyone they should have participated in the payment-kind."

Illinois is the second-largest producer of corn in the nation. Illinois and Iowa together produce 40 percent of the nation's crop.

Fred Garrett, crop statistician for the Illinois Crop Reporting Service, said a 100-bushel nationwide average yield would translate into a 5.2 billion bushel corn crop. That could bring carryover stocks down to 1 billion to 1.2 billion bushels, a level considered adequate but not excessive by traders.

"A 5.2 billion bushel crop would mean PIR and the weather together have accomplished in one year what everyone thought it would take two years of PIR to do," Garrett said.

However, the final verdict on the status of the state's corn crop won't be until harvest.

In the meantime, several crop reports will assess nationwide crop conditions.

Illinois hard hit leased its report of crop conditions as of Aug. 1, estimating the national corn yield at 103.5 bushels per acre, down from its July estimate of 110.1 bushels per acre.

Global was not as pessimistic as Worries about Illinois' crop, pegging the state's yield at 113 bushels per acre, down from a 117-bushel estimate in July. That compares to the Aug. 1 yield estimate of 121 in Iowa.

Missouri's yield is estimated as the lowest in the nation at 80 bushels per acre.

But it is Illinois officials who are asking U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block for relief for livestock producers by early release of PIR acres for grazing. So far, 19 counties have asked for the early release because regular pastures are drying up from the heat and lack of rain. That means a lack of food for livestock.

In Warren County, a total of 110 farmers have phoned local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service officials to call for an early release. Farmers can graze PIR acres Sept. 1, but say they need the acres earlier.

Ironically, the two counties areas hardest hit in the state are Knox County, Block's home county, and neighboring McDonough County.

Worries said he talked to Block recently and to Block's assistant, Ray Lett, about releasing the acres.

"They want to do it," Worries said, "but Block's staff doesn't, because some claim it would be undermining the intent of the PIR program. And some say it would be viewed as Block making some concessions for his home state of Illinois."

Worries estimated the state's average corn yield will be no more than 90 bushels per acre, very similar to the 1980 average yield of 93 bushels per acre.

"I'll be very surprised if we achieve the yield of 1980," Worries said. "It will take an immediate turnaround in the weather, and even if we do, much of the crop is beyond help."

Worries expects corn from his own farm to yield only 70 to 80 bushels, compared to last year's 180-bushel yield. The reason, he said, is the heavy and lack of rainfall. Last year, his fields received six inches of rainfall each in July, July and August. The season's total rainfall on his farm so far was only 2.5 inches, he said.

Home loan counseling is offered to Viet veterans

VOICES, Inc. (Veterans Outreach Investment Counseling and Educational Services) has announced a free service for Vietnam-era veterans who are interested in purchasing real estate, according to Bob Fowler, president of VOICES. Fowler said that now interest rates are down, the home-buying market looks favorable. Due to the many intricacies involved in financing a new home, many veterans are unaware of their right by law, and the most efficient method to complete the purchase.

VA, FHA conventional and other financial instruments will be evaluated to ensure the veteran is aware of the best method of financing. All a veteran needs to be eligible for this free service is a copy of his DD214 (discharge papers). Attitude-leadership class at BAC

A course to teach the attitudes and leadership abilities needed to succeed in business will be offered this fall at Belleville Area College.

2 Area College incumbents to run

Two incumbent members of the Belleville Area College Board of Trustees plan to seek re-election in the November 1983 election, they said Thursday while here for Granite City Center dedication ceremonies.

Those whose elective terms are expiring are Mrs. Patricia Bartoskas, New Athens, chairman of the board, and Robert Dintelmann, Belleville, a former BAC board chairman.

The seven-member board governs Community College District 522, whose main campus is on Carlyle Road in Belleville.

The local two-year college center was established this summer, with fall classes opening next week for the convenience of those residing in the northern portion of the district.

A major center also is to be designated in the southern area of the district in the future.

CATHOLICS MEET

The Southern Illinois Divorced and Separated Catholics will meet Wednesday, August 17, at 7:30 p.m. in Eckhard Hall of St. Boniface Church, Edwardsville. Joan Kershaw will be the speaker on "Boosting Self Esteem." Newcomers are welcome.

Attitude/Leadership is an adaptation of the "I Can" course developed by Zig Ziglar, author of "See You at the Top." That book and the course are based on the belief that an individual "can get what he wants in life if he helps enough people get what they want."

Terry D. Biales, Belleville East High School instructor who will teach the BAC course, said it fills a gap in business education.

"Most business courses are geared to practical applications, but 90 percent of success in business deals with attitude," Biales said. "This course is for anyone who wants to develop a positive mental attitude."

The course emphasizes the need for a healthy self-image and ability to develop positive relationships with classmates, employers and families. It also deals with discovering the causes and cures for bad habits and attitudes, and developing positive and productive ones.

Although the BAC class is a business course, persons in other fields can benefit from it as well, Biales said.

The class, Business 299-16, will meet from 7 to 9:45 p.m. Tuesday for 16 weeks, beginning Aug. 23. Registration for the course, which is not listed in the fall schedule of classes, will be from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Friday in the Registrar's Office at the Belleville campus, 2500 Carlyle Road, Belleville.
